LIFE
ITSELF
IS NOT

What does it mean to truly live? Perhaps master of quotations, Robert Byrne, summed it up best when he said, "The purpose of life is a life of purpose."

This simple notion can take years for some to understand, yet as little as minutes to accomplish. In that spirit, we introduce the theme for the 2011 Campus Yearbook: Life Itself Is Not Enough.

Each person stands as the sole creator of his defining moments in life. What will you create? Whether engineering the next social networking site, or simply passing math class, each new goal represents a small step toward the greater purpose, realizing full potential through passionate means. To conquer, to achieve, and to leave a lasting footprint far surpasses the rewards of mere existence. Through actions, an open mind, and courage, you can prove to yourself and others that you are an individual with a purpose and reasons for doing the things you do.

As you peruse through the pages to follow, we challenge you to look beyond the pictures and words and instead discover the passion and purpose behind them. After all, pictures and words are not enough. More grandly, however, Life Itself Is Not Enough.

Up in Arms...
After the team scores their first home touchdown of the Homecoming Game versus Central Catholic, Matt Wygonik/12, Cas Galiszewski/12, Nick Berthal/12, and Rich Ledhak/11 root on the Blue and Gold. Wygonik said, "I painted up for each game to show my support for all of the seniors on the team." The painted crew typically met at the Cookout held at the basketball courts above Davis Field.

So, where did you typically spend your Friday nights? Did you work at the Dairy Queen to earn a few extra bucks? Maybe you just met with a closely knit group of friends to embark on regular, heated games of Halo or Call of Duty.

Regardless, a major component of high school life involved finding unique ways to stand out. Whether in the bleachers, behind the counter, or on the couch, students found memorable ways to make their marks, showing that life itself was not enough.

School spirit did not require a universal definition or a set of guidelines. Certainly, each individual student expressed his or her school spirit in different ways. These students used their encouragement to motivate and boost young athletes in every sport, helping them play their very best, and promoting explosive responses from the crowd.

"For the soccer team, having a huge student section helped us to get pumped up to win each and every game," said Kyle Terrill/11.

"The cheering of the crowd gave us the mindset that we could win and gave us a big hype before the games. It really made us better players," said Tim Johnson/11, while preparing for his football games.

The din of encouraging cheers came not only from students, parents, and fellow athletes, but also from a squad of roaring cheerleaders who faced the immense pressure of keeping the players' attitudes positive, even when games did not progress as expected.

"An excited and rowdy crowd really helps the cheerleaders to do their job better. It's tough to cheer and involve people when the crowd is stone-faced and quiet. When everyone has school spirit and gets involved, games are more fun and it's even more exciting when we win," said Courtney Woodhall/12.

Students organize their tastes

Eaters Separate, Divide, Conquer

Story by L. Jubie/12

The need to organize proved itself a hot potato between students and teachers. "Teachers are always getting on me about being organized," said Ross Jubie/10. After having discovered that binders and folders made staying organized as easy as pie, a fanatic group of students extended their regulation into the realm of food. "I eat circular cookies around in a circle until I get to the center and I'll eat breadsticks from both ends until I meet in the center. I have to organize candies like M&Ms into colors and then eat one of each, saving the largest of each color for last," said Kate Iseman/12 popping her last red M&M in her mouth. A buffet of students, including Iseman, avored a color-based filing system. "I divide fruit snacks by color and then order the groups by my least to most favorite flavor. I'll eat the candies one by one starting from my least liked to the best tasting," said Hannah Milheim/10.

Jocelin Herstek/10 said, "I also order my food from bright colored to dull. I eat the brightest food first and go down the line to the darkest one."

A selection of students profited from ready-made organizational devices. "I eat food off of divided plates so the solids and liquids never touch. I can't stand that. It's disgusting," said Herstek.

While handy academic organizational tools made distinguishing assignments a piece of cake, food allocation showed itself a compulsion almost as bittersweet as boysenberry pie.

UNTAMED FARM LIFE

Animals run wild on local farms

Located in a rural area, a herd of students lived on farms. With large, untamed animals at hand, the hilarious accidents occurred, sometimes with some regularity. Students shared vivid memories of agricultural mishaps involving their pets.

Jimmy Stewart/12 recounted a close encounter of the swine variety, when he said, "Well, I was about eight or nine years old, and I was visiting my grandparents on their pig farm. My grandpa decided to teach me how to feed the pigs, and being an excitable young boy, I was very ready to learn. He poured the pig slop into the trough, and then walked away and let me try. I was pretty small, so I had to climb onto the trough to pour the food in. Unfortunately I spilled both myself and all the food. I was then swarmed by a bunch of pigs who decided they didn't care I was in the trough, and just wanted food. I almost died!"

Cody Heasley/12 did not recall anything nearly as deadly, although he did experience a flock full of misfit poultry. "My favorite one looks like the Looney Toons Roadrunner. Another one looks like a penguin. Then, I had a rooster that had no grasp of time, and would crow at all hours of the day. This one I have now looks like a crow instead of a chicken, and even sort of crows."

Jocelin Herstek/10 had a much different farming experience. "Yeah, I have a bunch of horses and pigs . . . on Facebook's Farmville," said Herstek.

STALKERS

and Restraining Orders

Story by Lance Jelic/12

"I have stalked friends from behind bushes before," said Kayla Diller/12, as she pulled out her phone to update her Facebook status. Teenagers often shared their opinions, typically to the annoyance of adults. Social networking sites such as Facebook, Myspace, and Twitter provided a medium for high school students to express their intimate thoughts. Easy access to personal information led to the phenomena of "creeping," or harmlessly perusing the online posts of others. "I don't see a problem with it. You can remain in touch even when you can't see your friends," said Madison Ruman/12. Keeping in touch, however, seemed a far cry from the stalking in which she engaged. "I love to watch people and know what they're doing. I have followed people through the hallways just to find out where they are going. I have even broken into a friend's house because I wanted to know if she was awake. A person's Facebook status lets me creep without having to go anywhere," said Ruman. Not everybody enjoyed the readiness with which a student invaded another's privacy. "It's a little bit weird if a girl randomly starts talking to you about something you posted online," said Andrew Lesko/11. "Professional" student creepers may have trained for a successful career as a private investigator or lawyer, or they may have taken their first steps towards becoming the target of a restraining order.

The annual Telethon, which benefited the Salvation Army and Goodwill, took place from December sixth through December tenth. Students from all seven of the district's elementary schools came to a central location at Allegheny Towne Center to voice their Christmas wishes. The community viewed the Telethon on Comcast channel eight from 5:30 to 8:30pm, Monday through Friday.

Falyn Ritter/12 did not feel quite so warm while she played her part at the Telethon. "I sold raffle tickets in the entrance of Giant Eagle. I was seriously freezing every time somebody came in the doors. But it wasn't too bad, and I know I was doing a good thing, so that made me feel a lot warmer inside," said Ritter.

Matt Cecchetti/9 enjoyed the Telethon from the comfort of his home. He said, "I watched it one day and thought it was really good. I could tell they put a lot of effort into building the set and I was really glad to see that there were so many people there."

In order to raise money, the football team sparked a bonfire open to all students in the athletic area behind the high school. For the football team, the car smashing provided a chance to show off their strength. Neal Collecchi/11 said, "At the end of the night, the offense and defense competed to see who could rip the car door off. However, neither side was successful. Egos were definitely hurt." Wygonik said, "I enjoy any chance to show off my muscles." Blayze Stefaniak/12, Pat Bouch/11, and Eric Saul/12 not only showed physical strength in the car smashing, but they also displayed their musical talents. Puts the "Show" in Show Choir

Dancing accompanies student routines

Story by S. Klock/11

While participation in some choirs primarily involved only singing, the members of show choir underwent intense, physical training. Different from other chorus classes, show choir included dancing to upbeat music. The show choirs displayed their physical feats, as well as vocal talents, during special school events and for nursing homes during the Christmas season.

Autumn Albert/11 said, "The dancing makes the singing come alive and makes it a full performance."

"I think the dancing really brings a smile to the faces of our audiences. So not only is the dancing fun, but performing for an audience that enjoys it too is a great feeling," said Cecily Ziemanski/11.

To perfect the routines, members had to donate many more hours than those who sang in the other, non-dancing, choral groups.

Cassie Thompson/10 said, "If something reminds me of one of our songs, I'll break out in dance right away."

Although some guys can be shy about dancing in public, the show choir men flaunted their skills openly.

Ryan Francart/11 said, "We have a lot of fun moves that still look manly enough for us to do."

"It doesn't make us any less manly because it requires the same dedication as any sport, and I would like to see some of those people do the lifts we do," said David Hampshire/11.

Ziemanski summed up her feelings when she said, "In my opinion, dancing definitely puts the show in show choir."

Students arrived in the upper and lower cafeterias on the morning of Wednesday, December 22nd to fill their cups with coffee. However, most individuals flocked toward the live music at the SADD Club Coffee House.

Even Marissa Gray/9 who served beverages during the event mentioned the music when asked to comment on the occasion. "The Coffee House went well. We sold a lot of tickets, but the best part was listening to the band," she said.

The event provided a platform for Kiski Area students, and their classmates took notice.

Students forged words into emotional works that sculptures and paintings could not capture as concretely. "Poetry is a way of expressing yourself, like a painting, except through words," Danielle Hunt/11 said. In many English classes, teachers taught poetry as an integral part of the curriculum. Like most subjects, not all students found the poetry projects enjoyable. A few students, however, found a special release in poetry.

To the admirers of T.S. Eliot or Sylvia Plath, writing formed a channel to escape, a way to express their innermost feelings and ideas, a way to feel better.

"Poetry is underrated. It is important to help you to express what you feel. My poetry normally reflects what I feel at the time. It is always different," said Chelsie Hill/11. "It also helped with difficult emotions and stress. It's been a friend for those times when you only want to share your secrets with a notebook. I always feel better after I write."

Everyone implemented a different style and emotion into their poetry. Some preferred gaiety and rhyme, while others favored a dark, somber tone.

However, if a student had knowledge of the English language and strong emotions, then poetry served as an alternative way to accomplish it.

In the ballad for the band's show, Imaginarium, Katie Sheaffer/11 rolls her silver ball out onto Davis Field. "The balls were my least favorite prop in the whole show. They would always blow away and it was hard to catch them," said Sheaffer. In addition to the balls, she and the other guard members utilized rifles, flags, and hats.

Flying equipment takes performers to new heights

Out of 17 school districts in Westmoreland County, Kiski Area represented the only one to use flight equipment for their rendition of Peter Pan. The flight equipment, pixie dust, and swords lifted the classic Peter Pan out of the storybooks and into the air.

The cast exhibited their flying prowess in six scenes throughout the musical. "From where I sat, I enjoyed the flying scenes the most. It looked real," said Kelly McWilliams/10. "I also liked the props and characters on stage; they were very colorful." Of course, the aerial stunts did not materialize out of thin air. The equipment required a complex harness for the flyer and at least two operators to ensure the safety of the flyers and the other actors on stage. With the mechanical means, a motivated cast reached for the stars, or at least the ceiling. "At first, the harness really hurt and flying was really frightening; but, it was a blast once I got used to it. I'm really grateful I got to be a featured dancer, which I loved, and experience the once-in-a-lifetime opportunity

The cast and crew had only three weeks to run the show with the flight equipment. Perhaps flight operator Matt Wygonik/12 summed it well when he said, "This was an experience I'll never forget because although we barely had any time to perfect every dip and dive the actors had to make, we pulled through and had a great show."

The spring musical Peter Pan featured highly coordinated, energetic dancing.

"It took a lot of energy to get through the whole show. We pulled it off though," said Mike Minda/11.

Amber Vozar/11 agreed and said, "I loved the tango's beat and its style of movement. By the end of the show we all were exhausted. Then we about died knowing we had to do it all over."

Such success might not have become possible, except for the previous dancing experience of much of the cast.

"I practice dancing at Just Dance By Justine Albert. The stiff style of dancing we had to do as Indians was a lot different than what I am used to doing," said Autumn Albert/11.

Rozewicz also played a male character in a production of Into the Woods Jr.

Priorities Vary Greatly

Students reveal afternoon routines

Story by J. Penta/12

"Well, the first thing on my list is obviously to get to the bathroom as soon as possible," said Louis Palermo/12. Although rushing to the bathroom after arriving home from school seemed the trend among students' afternoon routines, that marked the end of the similarities. Differing activities and priorities led students to follow highly varied afternoon schedules. Palermo/12 continued, "And then I eat dinner, and take a shower, and maybe play some Xbox. Then, sometimes I'll do my homework, if I have any. In the mornings, I just have time to shower again, eat breakfast, and leave." Jayde Burns/10 allocated more time to relaxing.

"Well, when I get home, I watch TV or go on the computer for a while, shower, do my homework, then I eat dinner and go to sleep. My evenings are pretty chill," said Burns.

Still, others developed obsessions with an activity to the point that it became their one and only priority. Then homework suffered from constant inattention, trash in the kitchen piled up, and pets had to beg for food.

George Petree/12, a victim of such compulsive addiction, said, "When I get home, I do whatever I need to get done as fast as possible. Then, I sequester myself to my computer and rock 'Day of Defeat' all night, mostly beating on Louie Palermo."

Homework and its many evils served as a popular topic of discussion for students. Students had to balance homework with their extracurricular activities.

Anthony Palmiscio/11 said, "With all my activities and trying to maintain a social life, it was difficult to find time for homework. Homework is important though. I mean, if I didn't do homework for Mrs. Schaeffer's class, I'd be doomed!"

While some students made homework a top priority, others procrastinated until the last possible moment before a due date.

Dylan Dulick/10 said, "Procrastination is not a problem; it's a solution. There's no point in doing homework until it becomes necessary. I often did my homework during homeroom. Having fun while I'm not in school is more important to me."

LOST

in the deep jungle of paper applications

Story by K. Diller/12

Thousands of colleges sent countless flyers, e-mails and overall junk to seniors, hoping to entice promising applicants. Every day, seniors opened the mailbox or checked their e-mail accounts only to find a new set of bright, eye-catching ads that displayed eager students smiling on their way to class and picturesque campuses. When asked about the amount of college mail she received, Jenna Galley said jokingly, "College mail is exciting because it makes me feel wanted."

However, the majority of this propaganda remained untouched, collecting dust in a forgotten corner, or became promptly deleted. "All of the college mail I receive is either lost or erased, but it is probably better off that way," said Jocelyn Nelson/12.

Several students professed that the excessive college mail existed as merely a nuisance.

"The worst part about fliers is that they give me paper cuts," said Michelle Krynock/12. "Suddenly, a school does not seem so great when I am bleeding profusely."

Despite the overwhelming mountain of ads, students selected colleges based on their personal needs. Jordan Borst/12 said, "The most important factor in selecting a college is their acceptance rate into graduate schools. I need a college that will prepare me for the future, not one that just looks good on paper."

Senioritis runs rampant through graduating class

Story by J. Penta/12

"Well, I slacked a lot more in previous years actually," said Penny Rossi/12, "but I still managed to get by with minimal effort this year too."

This pattern of behavior appeared with some frequency among students of all grades, but plagued the senior class most severely. After completing their senior project, some students felt compelled to do nothing the rest of the year.

Elliott Baker said, "I believe the technical term is senioritis, a condition in which all motivation leaves the student, resulting in complete laziness and inadequacy. However, I blame teachers, not the students for this phenomenon. I believe the frequency of floggings, whippings, and verbal lashings are in direct correlation with student performance."

Wai-Lun Lin/12 said of student motivation, "I suppose that if you have already passed, there isn't much more to do. Once you are accepted into a college, and are graduating, I don't see much of a reason to keep going - academically."

"Sometimes I can be a big slacker," said Jeff Lorent/12, "which is good for the time being, on those days when I don't feel like doing anything. But sometimes I get myself in a bad spot, because then I have to go back and redo everything. I end up spending way more time than I would have in the first place if I had just put in some effort initially. Slacking is whack . . . ing."

When you first came, what did you notice was the biggest difference between living here and in Sweden?

"The food. I don't really like it. There's also a lot more rules here. You can go wherever you want and pretty much do what you want in our high school. It's more like college."

Do you think that after you leave here, that you will come back to visit?

"I will definitely come back. I'm not sure yet if I will go to college here or back in Sweden."

What's one of the things that you will never forget about while you were here?

"Well, I haven't experienced everything yet. I will definitely not forget all the friends and my host family."

That really made this season and program unique."

WHICH

class rules the school?

Students unleash opinions on grade distinctions and attitudes

Story by J. Penta/12

"Seniors have more to do than just single out a freshman in the corner for personal entertainment. Between filling out college applications, senior projects, and work, who really has time to bully people?" said Shelby Klick/11. Certainly, members of each grade had specific opinions on others' attitudes. Cara Suni/12 said, "The best thing about the freshman class is that they took over the 200 building for homeroom, so I can now have a far better locker location. For that, I can spare them my wrath. Also, I'm too scared that I'll say something rude to a freshman and he'll turn around and be like, 'Hey, I'm a senior/junior/sophomore,' and then I'll be the embarrassed one."

Offering a different perspective, Ashley Enciso/12 said, "Honestly, I haven't really encountered many freshmen. But, the ones I have met are nice, although they are still annoying. What freshman isn't?" "I don't have a problem with the senior class, as long as they all realize that the sophomores really rule the school," said Jayde Burns/10. More positively, Gretchen Liska/12 said, "I treat them with the same utmost respect as I would treat any other student. I was never treated badly by a senior. I may have been looked down upon like every other freshman, but I never recall being mistreated. I feel that since I was never treated poorly by seniors in my freshman year, that I treat them the same way I was treated."

Swimmers dive deep into pool class value

From the first tentative step into the sometimes icy water to the hurried change between classes, differing opinions echoed through the pool locker room. The jubilated cries of overly enthusiastic students bellowed alongside mournful wails of those less eager to jump in the drink. Juniors had to take pool class, whether they liked it or not.

"I hate learning all the different strokes and the gross feeling on my skin and hair after class. It stays with me for the rest of the day and makes me feel all nasty," said Brianna DelleDonne/11.

"I look forward to pool class. It's wet and wild because we play water polo and that's the next best thing to hockey," said Nick Despotakis/11.

Along with perfecting swimming techniques, eleventh grade pool class offered some useful survival skills to its participants.

"We learned how to flip a canoe and make a floating device out of clothing. If I was ever drowning I would use those to save my life," said Ashleigh Fowkes/11.

"Taking pool isn't all bad. I don't mind it because it's a nice change from normal classes," said Mitch Horrell/11.

In the 100 meter race, Logan Haines strides toward the finish line at the Butler Invitational. "When I'm running, I try not to think too much. I just let my legs do the work naturally," said Haines. He had his personal best race in his freshman year with a time of 11.3 seconds.

Shady Situation...

As she works on a project for Mr. Jewart's Art III class, Alexis Retter/11 shades a figure. "I prefer pencil drawings over ink drawings because it's so much easier to shade," said Retter. In her spare time, she sold jewelry that she created and designed.

Which church do you belong to and how long have you gone there?

"I go to Grace Community Church in Vandergrift. I've gone there all my life."

How important is religion to you and do you think it's cool to practice?

"It is very important to me. Without it, I wouldn't be the person that I am. My religion has shaped almost every aspect of my life. It's definitely cool to have strong beliefs."

In what church activities have you participated?

"I help out at the church Bible club for the elementary school kids. I also love helping out at the Food Bank. We do that once a month. Every summer, we go to church camp in the Laurel Highlands. It's so much fun."

What got you interested in competitive figure skating?

"My inspirational cousin, Ryan Felt/12, told me that I would never be a better skater than him. This challenged me to prove him wrong and squash his words into the dirt."

When did you finally realize that your talents could earn you national recognition?

"My coach, Bob Mock, always placed me first at the beginning of exhibition performances. People always questioned who I was and how I got to become a good skater. Since then, I've won seven national skates held all over the eastern part of the country."

Do you have any plans to pursue skating as a career?

"It's really hard to succeed in skating as a career choice. There's just not that many colleges that offer that as a viable team sport. We'll see though. I'd love to eventually make it to the Olympics."

HOMES

Students discuss pros and cons of camping

In western Pennsylvania, outdoor activities like camping have entertained students greatly over the summer and early autumn seasons.

"I love the outdoors and to be away from home for a little," said Tiffany Yeager/10.

Josh Wiskeman/10 shared the same love for the outdoors and said, "I like camping because I get to be dirty, in the woods with bugs all over me, while sleeping with the bears."

Many classic activities like making s'mores and sitting around the campfire brought people together as they camped.

"I like sitting around the campfire, singing, and playing the guitar while camping," said Maryssa Williams/10.

Still, people went camping for reasons other than rest and relaxation around a campfire; they instead desired excitement.

"I usually only go camping during the summer at Tri-County to ride the quads," said Kayla Salego/10.

Similarly, Morgan Orr/10 shared the same interests and said, "My favorite thing about camping is going quad riding."

Even though many enjoyed camping, not everyone felt the same love for the activity.

"Camping is dirty and bugs get into your tent. Also, I hate washing dishes because there isn't a dishwasher," said Caitlyn Ziemianski/10.

Can't Get ENOUGH

What is your favorite outdoor activity?

"I like the smell of fresh cut grass because it smells really good to me since I was a little kid."

Ryan Klingensmith/10

"I like playing volleyball outside because it's awesome, but indoors in fun too."

Jayde Burns/10

"Football because I like the thrill of it and because I love the Cavaliers. Go Cavs!"

Jamil Graham/10

"Camping because I like hanging with friends and not being stuck inside."

Lauren Byrd/10

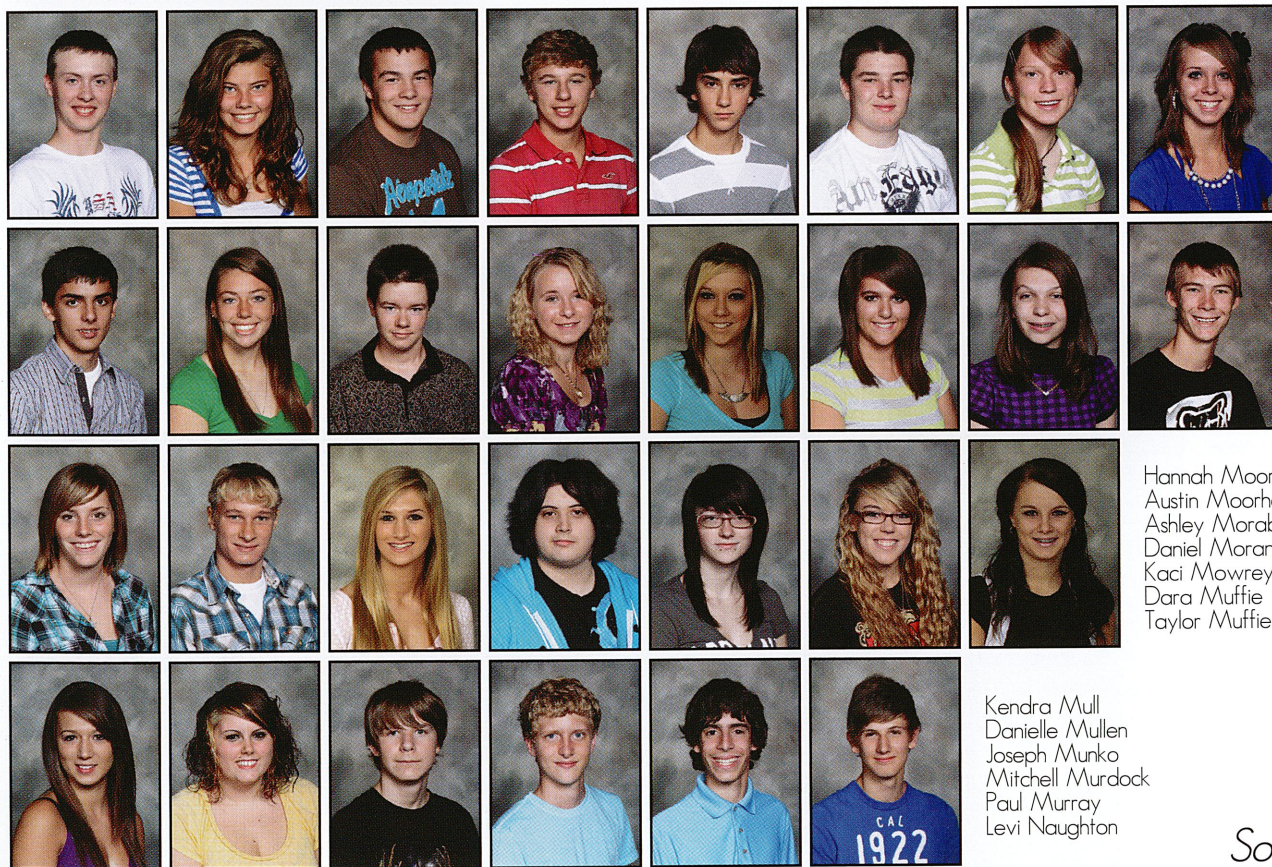

"Hunting because it gives you a lot of time to yourself."

College Anyone?

At the College Fair held in the gym on October 14, Ariel Ware/10 fills out an information card for Slippery Rock University. "I want to attend Slippery Rock because it's just far enough away from home, but close enough to see my friends on the weekends," said Ware. She aspired to apply to three different colleges, all inside Pennsylvania.

Crazy Like a Fox...

Just before a soccer game against the Fox Chapel Foxes, Jessica Lewis/10, Katie Clever/10, and Kylie Weber/10 primp for the match. "Playing Fox Chapel was always a difficult chore. They always brought their best game to the field, every time," said Clever. On the team, Clever played outside mid-fielder.

How long has your family owned and operated a trucking corporation?

"We actually have a trucking company and a plant in New Kensington. My grandfather, Paul Riggles, started the company with only five trucks. We now have 42."

What has been your role in the company?

"A couple of times, I've had to drive a few of the trucks on our property when they had to be moved. I also have worked on them as a mechanic. At times, I've had to dispatch them to different locations."

What do you aspire to do with your future?

"I want to go into the Coast Guard, retire after about 20 years, and then come back to take over the family business. This will allow me to carry on the legacy and tradition that my grandfather and father built."

It All Weighs In...

On a hot August afternoon at band camp, Cole Insko/10 performs the opener of the band's show, Imaginarium. Insko said, "The drum I carried weighed about one fifth of my weight and you had to be in great condition to carry it throughout the whole show." According to DCI Athletes, in the middle of a performance, a drummer's heartbeat matched that of a fit marathon runner.

Set for Success...

Ready to take on his opponent, Mitch Nagy/9, sets his stance to wrestle his fellow teammate at a typical practice. "It makes practice tough when you have to wrestle someone who isn't in your weight class," Nagy said. Nagy and his other teammates say they get their inspiration through the pictures of graduate Justin Harold that hang in the lockerroom.

How many hours do you put in running each week?

"During track season, I run six days per week. Outside of track, I run whenever I get the chance, for my own enjoyment."

How did you develop your passion for running?

"My older brother, Ryan, started running in intermediate school, so he got me interested. I didn't really start running until seventh grade. I really don't have a set schedule for running. I just try to do it when the weather cooperates and I have the time."

Are there any future records you would like to break?

"There are no particular records I would like to break. I just want to keep working hard and doing my best. I would like to surpass the records that I set last year and help the team out as much as I can."

MULTI-PLAYER

Madness Multiplies

Gaming students connect through web

"I like playing Call of Duty: Black Ops with my friends over the internet," said Tyler Leist/9.

The internet has changed gaming from an activity secluded to a small group of individuals assembled in one location, to an experience shared by hundreds simultaneously. The allure of a game arises in part from its online technical capabilities.

"Halo is the best game, especially Halo 3. The actual game takes a long time to beat, but when you do beat it, you can test your skills against other players online. I am pretty good," said Bryce Nelson/9 proudly.

Lee Downey/9 said, "My favorite game is Assassin's Creed: Brotherhood. It has a new online multi-player mode. The new version with multi-player is way better than the older version that only supported a single player mode. It's convenient to be able to play against people that don't even have to be in the same room as you. It's amazing that I can play against people from across the world."

Of ten people asked, common consensus among gaming students showed a preferable disposition towards games with an online multi-player ability. In the ever expanding realm of connectivity, games served as a bridge from one game-loving student to another.

How did you develop your passion for dancing?

"I started dancing when I was three years old. I really can't say how I developed my passion. I just followed in my sister's footsteps with it."

Have you received any awards or recognition for your skills?

"I have competed in many competitions and even won dancer of the year at A Step Above Dance Academy located in New Kensington when I was 11 years old. Also, as part of colorguard, our band and girls placed second in the nation in our class. Staff members chose me as Colorguard Rookie of the Year."

How do you plan to incorporate your dancing skills later in life?

"I definitely would do a dance team in college. I'd love to actually major in dance, but there really aren't that many positions open to make a living in that. I can always bust out my moves at weddings."

Heat of the Race...

For his trans-tech class, Mr. Heater/Fac. sets up the CO<sub>2</sub> cars for the starting gate of his students' race. "Overall, it's a project that the kids look forward to every year because of the speed of the cars and the competition aspect," said Heater. Austin Flick/12 set the school record for the race last year with a speed of 57mph over 75ft.

WHERE

does the true learning happen?

"As a student at Kiski, I always knew that I wanted to come back and teach at my own Alma Mater. After I landed the job, like many other new teachers back in the day, I had to move from room to room and keep all of my students' records on an organized cart that I pushed from that same room to room, sometimes outside in the rain," said veteran math teacher, Mr. Fantaski. "Edinboro and all the classes that I took didn't prepare me for that traveling cart."

Such recollections spawned the notion of whether or not colleges truly prepared students for the sometimes denoted noble profession of teaching. English teacher, Ms. Brine offered her opinion when she said, "I have huge respect for what I learned in my core classes, the ones dealing with English exclusively. The theory classes were the ones that I question now. Big ideas don't always work, unless the whole institution submits to them. A teacher learns more in his/her first day of school than what he/she has in a full semester theory class at college."

Additionally, Ms. DePanis comically said, "College definitely didn't prepare me for Mr. Gonnella. I didn't realize that my rated performance would totally depend on my ability to bake bundt cakes and cannolis."

Waters Briney

English project, freshmen sink or swim
Story by S. Wesoloski/12

Hemingway may not always make the favorite authors list for many high school students; nevertheless, 9th and 11th grade English teacher Ms. Brine courageously sought to bring Hemingway's novel, The Old Man and the Sea, to life. Ms. Brine asked her Honors English 9 classes to recreate a scene from the book in the form of a 3-D diorama. Students worked in small groups and could use virtually any medium to build their miniature adaptation of the book.

"My inspiration for the project was the fact that Hemingway can be dry. A project of this nature makes the story come alive," said Ms. Brine. Once the students began to work, they ran into some unforeseen construction challenges. "I found doing the clay work on the swordfish to be really difficult," said Bill Oplinger/10. Oplinger and his group finally overcame their struggles and produced a project worthy of the "A" they received. He also said, "Working with the other students to build our boat was my favorite part of the project." In addition to the display itself, students presented and explained their work in front of the class who then voted on their favorite interpretation. The winner received ten bonus points, along with the liberty from Ms. Brine to brag to their classmates. Mia Shaffer/12 reflected on her experience as a 9th grader, saying, "This unique project gave the students a fun opportunity to be creative and materialize one of the scenes from the novel."

Tenor Tones...

In front of the crowd at Davis Field on Homecoming night, David Hampshire/11 sings the Alma Mater. Hampshire said, "It was great to have the chance to sing for my peers and friends. I really wasn't that nervous." He sang tenor in Cavalier Choir, Jazz Choir, and KAndescence Show Choir.

SURPRISE

o f the Year

How/why did nationals happen mid-season?

Story by Lance Jubic/12

"Dude, I think we should go to nationals," said Mr. Heiny/Fac. to Mr. Pityk/Fac. in a call around three in the morning just after the home competition. Minutes afterward, the two found themselves on Pityk's couch discussing the possibilities of what previously seemed out of the question.

"After seeing the show come together for the first time, coupled with positive feedback from the judges and parents, we threw all caution to the wind and took Imaginarium into the dome," said Heiny.

At the September 15 practice, Mr. Pityk stood on top of the Sky-Jack with cell phone in hand. He anxiously awaited a call from Mr. Koter/Adm. to find out whether or not the School Board approved the impromptu trip for the band to take the show to Indianapolis. After receiving the good news, Mr. Pityk called the band to the 50 yardline to sinisterly ask the band if they wished to go to Nationals.

"It was so funny. When Mr. Pityk called the band to the 50, we thought he actually wanted us all literally on the yard line. We all lined up like ducks from front to back in the middle of the field," said Alayna Korchok/10.

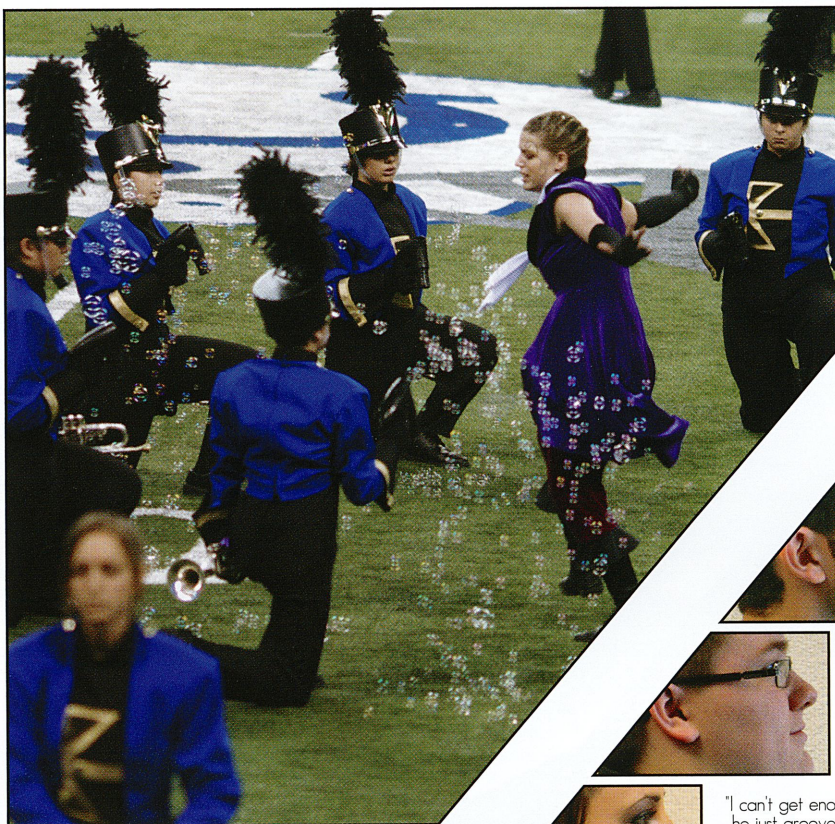

"We all thought we were about to get yelled at. I was just happy that it wasn't just the guard for once," said Madison Frye/11. Instead, Mr. Pityk ironically asked a single question that brought a vast majority of the band to tears. "Do you think you can make this show the greatest it can be?" asked Pityk. When the band collectively screamed, "Yes," he asked them if they wanted to go to Nationals.

"I completely lost it and started bawling, along with just about everyone around me," said Hannah Moore/10. Still, some reacted for a different, more personal reason.

"We were just so happy to have the chance to redeem ourselves from the previous trip, and certainly, by placing second in Class AA, we did just that," said Samantha Bauman/11.

Ballad Bubbles...

As Victor Cardamone/12 performs a solo, Rochelle Linsenbigler/12 dances her way to the middle of the field. "I loved the use of props and how the band made a circle for the ballad," said Linsenbigler. Accidentally running into Cardamone served as her most memorable practice moment.

Female mechanic equals male counterparts

Story by J. Penta/12

Covered in dirt, rust, and oil, the trainee mechanics of the Vo-Tech auto mechanics class raced about in a testosterone-fueled rush of tools, nuts, and bolts. Some fixed customer cars, while others practiced on ones generously donated by individuals. Amidst the manly mechanics worked one student of the fairer sex.

"I don't mind being the only girl. It's not easy, but whatever. I learned most of what I knew before I came here from my dad, just like everybody else," said Leigha Tamborski/12, as she looked up from the brake rotor that she prepared to resurface.

Two other girls entered the program along with Tamborski, but all of them eventually dropped out of the program. Tamborski hoped to work on motorcycles someday, after moving to Tennessee, although the Vo-Tech program did not cover motorcycles and their high-revving engines.

"It was way harder to gain the guys' respect my first year, but they know now that I'm just as good as them. I get treated just like anybody else now," said Tamborski. Among other smaller projects, Tamborski rebuilt the automatic transmission from a car, and worked with other students to turn an SUV into a pickup truck.

Other mechanics dreamed bigger dreams, in physical size at least. Dave Antal/10 said, "I want to be a diesel mechanic when I graduate. I'd like to get a job working for ECM, a trucking company. My dad works there, and they pay pretty well."

Both Antal and Tamborski had fathers who worked as mechanics; they decided to follow in their dads' footsteps, and continue the trade into the next generation.

FBLA members keep it in the black

Story by D. Donatelli/10

"If making money was a science, I would be Albert Einstein," said Kyle Horrell/12 when asked about the importance of his business course. While some students, such as Horrell, aimed to pursue a career as an entrepreneur, taking classes geared toward business and accounting, others preferred joining the Future Business Leaders of America.

Those students in FBLA tasted the sweet nectar of success at their one and only competition of the year. After placing third in the Financial and Banking Systems contest with teammates Mike Huet/11 and Randy Dengler/11, Pat Easley/11 said, "I was rather surprised that we actually took third place. I was very pleased with our spectacular performance in the competition. Our answers were based solely on a series of educated guesses from Randy, Mike, and of course, myself. The competition was a great experience and I look forward to further success, in competition and in business."

Shortly after, members of FBLA had to put the competition and classes on hold, and set their sites on upending the faculty in the annual Students versus Faculty Floor Hockey Game. When asked about the possibility of cashing in on a student victory, Randy Dengler said, "Win? Really, you're asking if we'll win? That isn't the question. Of course we are going to win. The question is whether or not the scoreboard will have enough lights to display the points produced from our explosive, yet civilized, scoring attack."

Chem Concepts...

Various stenchs turn noses upward

Story by K. Painter/12

Every student had to take gym class for four years, every three days at the minimum. The smell of the locker room served as a frequent topic of discussion. One student found the stench horrific.

Brandon Suprano/11 said, "People need to shower daily. It smells so bad in the locker room and the gym in general. People should use deodorant after gym too."

Rachel Frye/11 agreed. "I hate the smell of people's body odor and socks. It's rank. I always bring deodorant because I don't like to smell bad," said Frye.

Some students, however, disliked and discouraged the smell of deodorants, perfumes, and cologne.

Sharyn Taylor/9 said, "I hate when people spray stuff in the locker room because it makes me sneeze a lot and I can't breathe that well. The rules should be enforced. No sprays allowed."

Evan Fitzgerald/10 said, "I hate the smell of Axe. When people spray too much of it in the locker room, it gets a little disgusting. I wash my stuff after every gym class and use only stick deodorant. I don't know why some people insist on wearing their gym clothes for months and use so much spray."

Mike Minda/11 said, "There is nothing awesome about how bad my gym locker room smells. Imagine a tropical rainforest filled with garbage and dead things.

Now imagine if somebody were to spill milk and vinegar over this rainforest.

That is the smell I have to deal with twice a week. Please, save the lemurs, and wash your gym clothes."

Students create with an uncommon medium

Story by J. Penta/12

Students in the Vo-Tech's welding classroom set sites ablaze on a daily basis. Acetylene torches melted metal into jelly-like blobs, hungry grinders tore through rusty sheet-metal, and the buzz of welders filled the air with howling shrills. In this room, metal became the medium of the artists, something beyond the reach of most people content to work with wood or clay.

"Someday, I'll be welding nuclear bombs and ships for the marines," said Jake Pollick/12, as he tilted up the heavy mask that protected his eyes from the blinding light of his welding rod. He further said, "I like making something from nothing, so that makes welding really great for me. I know that what I make will last, because it's all heavy metal. I have a MIG welder at home that I've used to fix my dirt bike frame a few times. I didn't really know how to weld before I started the program."

After he finished cutting his practice piece, Steve McCoy/12 shouted above the din of hammers and the banshee-like wail of the grinders and said, "I'd really like to be an underwater welder.

It is the most dangerous job in America right now, but you can expect to make at least $200 an hour. That is pretty cool, to say the least. On top of that, it's exciting. I think the coolest thing I have made so far is a go-kart that Mike Bucholz/11 and I created."

Tyler Eder/10, who also aspired to become an underwater welder, said, "It's my first year in the program, but I really like it so far. I decided on welding because there are so many job opportunities and so much money to be made. I knew how to weld a bit before I started the program, but nothing like this. Eventually, I think I'd like to be an underwater welder, and make lots of money doing it."

Careful to keep precise, Dylan Hughes/10 practices his flat-position welding in his tech class. "My cousin was the one who actually inspired me to enter into the welding field," said Hughes. Students enrolled in the welding program spent hours learning all the techniques necessary to become successful in welding.

Mass Appeal...

To prepare for her chemistry class with Ms. Scalise/Fac., Magen Smith/11 calculates masses of different elements. Smith said, "It's nice working in room 301 because it's usually more quiet than the other rooms." Outside of school, she worked at K-Mart.

The Class of 2010 voted Mr. Zachary Jankowski/Fac., perhaps the most energetic instructor at the school, Teacher of the Year. Various students and teachers commented on why students enjoyed having Mr. Jankowski for class.

"I think Mr. Jankowski is a great person to win Teacher of the Year. He's a great teacher because he really knows how to relate math to students," said David Hampshire/11.

"Mr. J is always running around the classroom and talks loudly. He definitely gets the students' attention when he's standing in front of the class," said Breanna Schall/11. "He is really hilarious and makes learning math fun."

Mr. Culler/Fac., a fellow math teacher at Kiski, said, "I have taught next door to Mr. Jankowski for the past two years and he is by far the most motivating and inspirational teacher in the school."

Learner Cas Galiszewski/12 said, "Mr. Jankowski is really fun and is always really energetic."

Another student, Michele Milheim/12 said, "Having Mr. J was surprising at first, especially with his boisterous teaching style. You never had to worry about falling asleep in his class. He would bounce around the room and randomly scream your name out, just to keep you on task. Still, I really learned a lot in Probability and Statistics class. I remember taking tests and vividly recalling information because he literally screamed it at times."

"Mr. J always makes himself available in homeroom to help people with homework, even if he doesn't have them for class," said Brianna DelleDonne/11.

Finally, in reference to his own experiences, Mr. Jankowski said, "Teaching is the most rewarding profession in the world. I feel very blessed to have the opportunity to attempt to positively impact young people on a daily basis."

VERTICAL Interior, Or Same-Side?

Geometry classes become atrium angles

Story by M. Rottshaefer/10

Since the beginning of the year, classrooms held students with their noses buried in textbooks. However, Mr. Fantaski's/Fac. geometry classes busied themselves with a different form of learning. Taking over the atrium with colored duct tape, he and his classes experienced a lesson first-hand, legs, and body. While it looked like fun and games, the students actually learned the different types of angles formed by parallel lines. Mr. Fantaski used three different colors of fluorescent duct tape to make parallel lines all over the atrium floor. Then, the students sat in various places to form the different types of angles parallel lines make, such as corresponding, alternate interior, and alternate exterior angles.

Sean Swartzlander/12 said, "Mr. Fantaski had us sit down in certain spots on the floor marked by the tape. Then he asked us questions about the tape, and about where we were sitting. There were two groups, but only one could go at a time. We had to mark things with the tape and stretch strings across it. It was miles better than just sitting in class like usual. Thankfully, it was pretty easy because we had just learned it before we did the activity."

When asked if he found this activity helpful, Mike Bair/10 said, "Yeah. It really helped me visualize the concepts of alternate and exterior angles and their congruency, but also it was great to have a break from the daily routine." Many students voiced a dislike for math, but this activity gave them a new perspective.

Kali Hepburn/9 said, "I do not like geometry at all, but I had fun because we actually did hands on visual learning, and it helped me understand better. I wish we could learn that way every single day."

Future carpenters discuss their career choice

Story by Joe Penta/12

Amidst a forest of cut lumber, brown-shirted students scrambled about with saws, sanding blocks, and cans of stain and varnish, working on their wooden projects. The carpentry room, filled with fresh air, held its doors open to reduce the amount of sawdust and varnish fumes. The scent of freshly cut pine logs, however, received a more friendly welcome. Students wore matching carpentry garb, consisting of khaki pants and t-shirts, work boots, and belts.

Brendyn Smitley/10 said, "I took manufacturing class before I decided to enter the carpentry program here at Vo-Tech. I haven't really had any experience with carpentry outside of school, but I like it. The guy who built our house has helped me learn some stuff, which has been really helpful. I really like building things, which is why I enjoy this so much. I don't really know exactly what job I want to pursue, but I think I'll end up doing construction somewhere, and would like to end up a union member."

Another carpentry student, Rick Ashbaugh/10 said, "This is my first year here at Vo-Tech, and I really enjoy it so far. I enjoy working with machines like the lathe to shape the wood into what I want it to become. It's so great to make something with your own hands. So far, I've built a bird house and a dog box at home using what I've learned here, and some other not-so-great stuff when I was younger. First, I took technical design classes at my old school, so I was pretty sure I would like this, and thought it could be a great job. I think I'd like to work at KCI. AP Spanish classes surprise students with holiday fiesta

The day before Christmas break, the sound of students singing Feliz Navidad filled the hallways. Ms. Varano's Fac. AP Spanish class made Christmas gifts and brought them to the Life Skills students.

Brandi Ritenour/12, one of the Spanish students, said, "It was really great to make the gifts for the Life Skills kids. I brought paper flowers, which are a traditional Spanish decoration. The students really seemed to enjoy the celebration, and it was great to see the joy on their faces. I had a great time."

Shannon Shearer/12 said, "I made a little reindeer out of popsicle sticks. They really seemed to enjoy it, and Ms. Varano's cake was also delicious. It was a great way to celebrate the holiday season."

One student enjoyed a different part of the celebration. Ryan Chepkevich/10 said, "My favorite part was the Spanish Christmas carols. I really enjoyed it because my brother's class came and sang to us last year. My favorite gift was the snowman."

Mrs. Mazak/Fac. agreed with Chepkevich. She said, "My favorite part was definitely the singing. It was great to have Christmas spirit."

Dylon Hughan-Fick/10 said, "I liked the reindeer best because it was really cool."

Mrs. Leezer/Fac. said, "I enjoyed the friendship bracelets because they were so unique."

The event gave the Life Skills students the opportunity to experience a different culture than their own. Both students agreed that they liked the taco the best of all the Mexican cuisine.

Chepkevich said, "I like tacos with lettuce, cheese, and tomatoes."

Hughan-Fick said, "I like tacos because they are spicy. Food from different countries is interesting."

ARTWORK Finds New Home

Teacher scores valuable print
 Story by K. Diller/11

Shortly after the year began, a copy of Rembrandt Peale's famous painting, Porthole Portrait of George Washington, arrived in Mr. Smith's/Fac. classroom. On how he obtained such a rare print, Mr. Smith jokingly said, "Actually, this painting is the original. I stole it from the Smithsonian Institution. The whole social studies department was involved, and Mr. McKenzie was the brains and mastermind behind the whole dangerous and covert operation."

In actuality, the Mount Vernon Institute, an organization that provides high quality research, education, and training into contemporary issues, donated this replication to the school in hopes of inspiring a greater interest in history among students and all who would see it proudly displayed in the school.

Even though Mr. Smith didn't score the original, the copy inspired awe in students and teachers alike.

"This portrait depicts our nation's first president as the true leader and champion that he proved himself to become. Both Peale and Washington are notable figures that shaped the path of history in the United States, and it is an honor that we can have such a realistic depiction of it in the school," said Mr. McKenzie/Fac. about the print.

When asked how this painting inspired him, AJ Callipare/11 said, "I have seen this painting in history books, but to see it in person is so much more stunning. It looks so realistic. We should be proud to have it."

Crossing curriculums, Mrs. Poleski, math department head, offered her opinion when she said, "I'm definitely not up on my history, but I would consider the acquisition of the painting as a real plus for the school."

Techers benefit from work co-op program

Story by J. Penta/12

Metal Solutions, Hamil Manufacturing, and Alle-Kiski Metals all had one thing in common: they all employed students who participated in the Work Co-op Program through Vo-Tech's machining class. Seven out of nine third-year seniors enrolled in the machining class through Vo-Tech spent part of their school day working, using what they had learned over the past three years to become highly productive workers.

Travis Shellhammer/12 said, "I'm on my fourth and final test for the Work Co-op Program. After that, I can go out and get a job. The tests evaluate your ability to operate all the machinery and to produce a quality product. They are a nationally mandated test, and are standard across the nation. When I finally pass the last test, I'll be able to come to school for a half day and then drive straight to work where I will have a regular job. I'd only have to come back to Vo-Tech every other Monday to check in and report how I am doing. I'd expect to be making from $9-13 an hour like everybody else that is currently in the program. I can't wait to start using what I've learned to make money on my own."

Ryan Garbin/12 said, "My uncle was a machinist, and I decided to be one too. Most of the projects we do are proof of ability, and we don't really make much that you can actually use; we have made a few truck parts though. I'm working on passing my four tests now, too. I can't wait to make actual working parts. More importantly, I can't wait to start making some money."

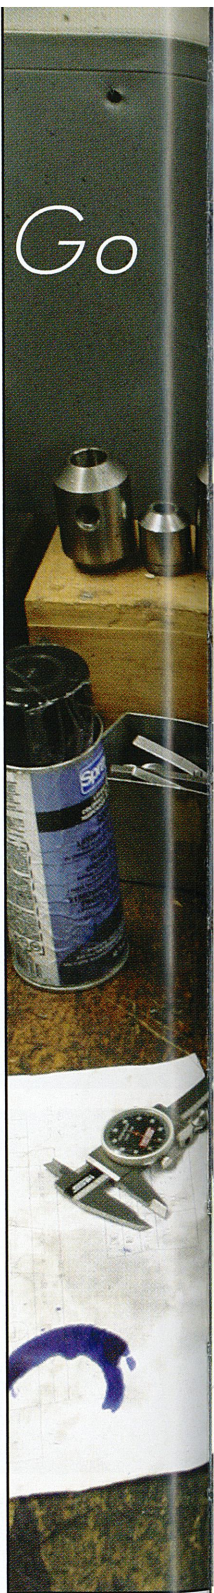

Vo-Tech's unique Work Co-op Program gave students a head start into the workforce, one simply not attainable through traditional and regular schooling.

Shows True Colors

Art III students unmask personality

Story by S. Young/10

"I'm sure people wonder what we really do in Art class. Do we study old and famous artists or finger paint murals? During the second nine weeks, we worked on creating paper mache masks. These masks probably do not match the masks you typically think of. We worked on paper mache masks that expressed personality and portrayed a deeper meaning than just to be decorative. To make the masks, we used paper mache (a mixture of flour and water in which newspaper strips are soaked) with foam board as a backing and added acrylic paints for color, as well as cemented in other mediums which we specifically chose to enhance our artwork," said Anna Spier/12. These masks did not serve the duties of a typical Halloween mask, as their design favored aesthetics and not comfort or durability. When asked about his motivation to do the project, Mr. Jewart/Fac. said, "We do this project to bring out their personal style and creativity. The masks were made not just for looks. They had to have a deeper meaning behind them. The masks couldn't just be constructed well; they needed to have a philosophical element behind them, too." "I really enjoyed doing this project. We had a lot of artistic freedom when we designed and made our masks. I felt like it was one of the most expressive projects we did all year. This year, in general, we have a lot more freedom than in Art II or Art I. As we get more experienced, Mr. Jewart lets us take a lot more liberties in our projects," said Stephanie Wesolosky/12.

What part did you play at the big game? Did you take the field, or were you the one painted up in the stands screaming your head off in support of the team? Athletic events provided the opportunity for bonding, whether as a team, a fan base, or a community. You didn't need to be the one wearing the helmet or the shin guards to achieve that big win. Your presence, spirit, and support proved exactly why life itself was not enough.

"The most scared I have ever been was when Coach Clouser decided to throw Gatorade cups all over the place after our horrible first half versus Penn Hills," said Bill Emerick/12. "It was crazy. I've never seen anybody more mad in my life."

The wrath of angry coaches echoed in the minds of several other players as well and sparked the question, just what happens behind closed doors in the lockerroom at halftime?

Cory Allen/11 said, "Some of the scariest stuff I've witnessed was during halftime of a bad game. Our coaches can be pretty angry guys sometimes."

With lingering fear in his eyes, Owen Copney/11 said, "Coach would punch walls and doors if we weren't doing that hot."

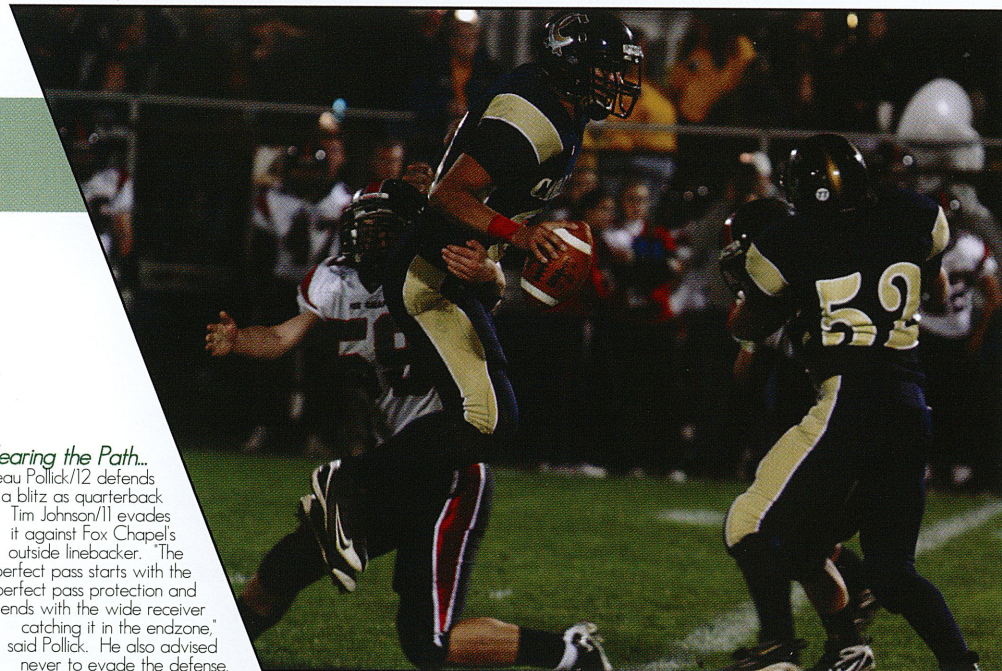

However, lighter, sometimes spiritual moments happened if he football hits you below the belt," said Copney.

He was giving this motivational speech during this one game, and he started crying. It brought most of the team to tears, but a few kids thought it was funny, I guess. I thought it was really inspirational. It's been really tough this year without his heart behind the team."

Between the two extremes of deranged anger and faithful brotherhood, there existed a medium of playfulness among the team. Some football

Weapon Unveiled

Male player adds strength to girls' team

Still one of the only larger schools around to not have a boys' volleyball team, the girls' volleyball team acquired Thad Paunovich/11, a male player.

Felicia Reid/12 said, "Thad really helped our team in making the playoffs this year. He was truly a great player, especially since this was his first year playing the sport."

Katie Long/12 said, "We took him under our wings and showed him the ropes, and he quickly got the hang of it. He was a great weapon to have in our arsenal, one that the other teams that we played didn't have."

However, the team faced much negativity from other schools that believed having a boy on the team gave them an unfair advantage. Still, although most area teams consisted entirely of girls, when a school sponsored no boys' team, the rules permitted any interested boys to play on the girls' team. Jolene Byford/11 said, "Other teams were upset that Thad was on our team because he's a great player. He really contributes to the team, and like any other player, we couldn't have done as well without him." As evident from observing Thad and the girls, a family formed throughout the trials of the season. Long said, "Thad is more than just a great player; he was like a brother to all of us. He was a trooper through all of the girls' whining, complaining, and teasing. Some of our best memories from this season include Thad. We were more than a team. This Kiski Area volleyball team is one big family that I'm sad to leave, but very happy to have been a part of."

Mean More Than Looks

Story by
K. Painter/12

The old tennis courts served as a constant source of frustration for both male and female tennis players. The sand, which helped absorb water on the old grass courts, acted as a major annoyance, randomly appearing in shoes, bags, socks, and eyes. Needless to say, the new hard courts yielded happier tennis players. Matt Krachanko/10 said, "I cannot wait to play on the new tennis courts. I always got sand from the old courts in my shoes. My mom always made me leave my shoes in the garage so I wouldn't mess up her house."

The new hard courts also presented many advantages for the players' games. Zach Ferraccio/10 said, "The newer courts have many advantages over the old courts. They play the bounce a lot better, and this year they changed to hard courts, which are just way better than grass courts. Hard courts play the ball better and have a lot of traction, unlike the older courts which had none whatsoever. It's a huge improvement."

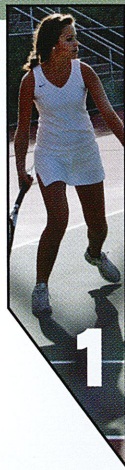

After reminiscing about their first years on the old, sandy courts, players relished in their excitement about the newly improved courts. Chelsea L. Kiebler/12 said, "As much as I will miss making sand castles and memories on the old courts, I am very excited that we have nice, new ones now. They are a great improvement in so many ways, especially in how we played the game."

Sometimes Has Its Price

Cheerleaders implement safety techniques

"To be a good cheerleader, you have to be fearless and consistent, and you have to have a squad that you can trust. Otherwise, you are going to get hurt, and it could be bad," said Kristi Issac/12.

Cheerleading accidents left many girls spiritless and injured, so it required mental fortitude and teamwork to keep everyone healthy.

With so many opportunities for injury, fear remained an imposing obstacle in cheerleading.

"Being tossed in the air is both thrilling and frightening. However, if you do not overcome the fear, you will not be successful," said Courtney Woodhall/12.

To relieve anxiety, cheerleaders used strategies such as focusing their vision on a single point while in the air and implementing extra girls on the ground for added security. These steps became necessary in case the flyer had an awkward fall; the extra hands would help to bring her back to earth safely.

The team also came up with other ways to prevent injuries. All cheerleaders knew that "joking around" could not transpire while performing stunts.

Additionally, the squad put conscious effort into pregame rituals to avoid injury while they cheered.

"As a team, we stretch and warm up to make sure the flyers are prepared for the stunts and no one is forced to perform a stunt that they are not comfortable with. We all have to be serious about what we are doing," said Ashley Ardellitz/12. She added, "Overall, the squad is the best source of support. The other girls instill the fearlessness in you, and with them, you feel invincible."

Never a Dull Moment...

"Noisy and crazy," said Kayla Ritenbaugh/12. She further said, "Those are pretty much the only two words I can think of to describe it. It is an experience like no other, even when I think back on the bus rides for marching band, nothing even came close. It's just so loud, and so crazy. Imagine a bus full of giddy six year old girls, and multiply that by seventeen."

Softball players had to endure long bus rides to distant schools for many of their games. Some students enjoyed the ride itself, while for others, it became nothing more than a moment of preparation for the game itself.

Jessica Pollick/11 said, "the long rides, some players cringed at the lack of talent. Some girls get all crazy and sing, yell, and carry on the whole ride. Sometimes people have sing-a-longs, and they can get almost the whole bus singing. Some girls though, get really serious and just sit there and stare. Or, they will listen to their iPods and just go blank. There are for sure certain people who just want to be left alone so they can concentrate on what they are doing. I hope they don't mind our singing, but we aren't going to stop any time soon." Although singing undeniably became the main event during the bus going to and from games. It's pretty bad though, since most people on the team aren't in a chorus or anything. The bad singing served as a means of bonding for the whole team. Coach Haney said, "You definitely couldn't plan on catching up on your sleep on the bus rides. I'm glad the girls showed talent on the field because they'd never make it on American Idol."

Wide age-range
affects season start

"I wasn't sure if we'd be any good with so many freshmen," said Richard Lednak/11. The cross country team, which had struggled with recruitment in the past, found itself for the first time in years, with a team composed primarily of freshmen.

"I barely knew any upperclassmen runners," said Zach Mszyco/9.

With the team transformed, coach Berzonsky planned a summer camping trip to Ohiopyle to foster a team identity. Strategically separated from close friends, runners had to quickly assimilate with strangers in the cramped conditions nestled away from civilization. Kylie Jackson/12 said, "We had to stay in a small tent with people we weren't necessarily friends with."

Naturally, the team became closer as the record-setting season progressed. However, although the boys' and girls' teams trained together, there stood a drastic contrast in how the members befriended one another.

"Before every race, the girls would gather in a circle with our arms around each other and Jess would pray," said Sammy Nepsa/9.

"During senior night, the girls all had dinner together. At the end of the season, we had a sleepover after the banquet," said Dominique Carino/12.

"For the start of the season, we shaved everyone's head in the locker room for the Alumni Race," said a smiling Lednak. Tallest among his male teammates, Mszyco lightheartedly said, "Ultimate Frisbee was awesome. I could reach above everyone else."

At first an initial conglomeration of strangers, the teams grew closer than originally imagined. Reflecting the true spirit of team camaraderie, Lednak said, "Qualifying for states and achieving a personal record was an awesome experience, but hopefully next year I'll have some male teammates racing alongside me."

Players prepare for varied weather conditions

Story by
R. Evans/11

With a season that stretches from the rainy months of March to the beginning of summer in May, the members of the baseball team had to prepare for any number of weather situations. They played through rain, freezing weather, extreme heat, high winds, and even snow.

"We had to play in the bitter-cold, icy tundra of the Kiski Area baseball diamond," said Kyle Horrell/12.

"Literally, our lockers and bags have to be packed with short sleeves, rain jackets, thermals, and gloves all at the same time," said Coach Christie.

"When you are on the field you also have long sleeves to survive. Mittens or gloves are essential," said Horrell.

Along with carrying full outfit changes everywhere they went, the athletes prepared physically for the changes the weather brought to the game. Throughout the cold weather, the players stretched more often to keep their muscles loose and ready for when they hit the field.

"The rain can mess with your traction to run down a ball and the wind can mess with the flight of the ball, causing it to drop really quickly or carry over your head," said Matt Wolczko/11.

Rain and mud tore up the field, and caused the ball to roll more slowly. The mud also prevented mowers from cutting the grass on a regular basis, challenging the players further.

"There was a game that we had when it was really cold out and one of our players got jammed when he was up to bat, and the bat broke in half. If it wasn't cold, that would have never happened," said Wolczko.

"The weather can affect us and make us freeze out there on the field. But you have to play through it," said Justin Stascak/10.

Girls discuss means to relieve pressure

The farther the girls' basketball team traveled for away games, the smaller their following fan base became. However, the lack of cheering from the crowds encouraged the girls to become closer together.

"We cheer each other on because it drives the team as a whole to work harder. When somebody makes a good play, we all get excited and it makes us all play better," said Morgan Waddell/11.

Despite the pressure of the game, pre-game rituals kept the girls in the right frame of mind. From playing the ninja game to listening to a special pre-game mix CD, the girls found a way to relax before games. Right before every game, Maddie Antone/10 lightened the team's mood with an inside joke.

"It's a secret between team members that we like to keep to ourselves," said Antone jokingly. The team's strength and unity led to success both at home and away. However, away games often created a greater sense of competition in the girls. Not only did they have to overcome their rival team, but away games yielded another daunting challenge.

"The crowd can be annoying at away games. All they want to do is distract you. If they get rowdy, you just have to ignore it and play the game," said Kaylie Dilts/10.

For certain team members, the crowd's taunts and shouts only drove them to persevere. "When you play at an away game, you want to show them up and prove everyone they're wrong. It is their home court, and that makes victory even sweeter," said Carlie Zatko/11.

Athletes, warriors revisit swimming lessons

Story by
J. Penta/12

Humans, by nature, travel on land, not in the water. Some daring souls chose to defy nature and join the swim team, instead of one of its land based cousins, such as track or cross country. Elizabeth Prager/10 made the choice to swim her races, instead of running them.

"My dad taught me how to swim when I was very young. I was probably about four. I started swimming competitively in kindergarten at the Freeport pool. It was kind of crazy. I felt like I was going to drown because I had no idea how to really swim. I was really bad when I first started, so it was actually pretty disturbing to see. It looked like I was just drowning and splashing water everywhere."

Kelly Kuzemchak/11 also competed on the swim team. She said of her early swimming experiences, "I learned to swim at lessons through the YMCA in the fall and summer from when I was about five. We just learned to kick and blow bubbles underwater. I kept at the lessons until I was about ten and had learned all the strokes. The very next year I joined the summer team. At first I was nervous to race, but now I love it and have fun."

Micah Pauly/12 enrolled in the school's advanced aquatics class, but not to improve his times at the next meet, as he did not compete on the swim team. Pauly said, "I enrolled in advanced aquatics because I needed to learn how to be a better swimmer. I'm joining the Marines soon and if I can't swim, I'm out of luck. # WHY LIFE ISN'T ENOUGH

Staff unveils origins of 2011 Campus theme

Story by
S. Rozewicz/12

For its excellence in high school journalism, the 2009 Campus Yearbook won a Silver Crown from the Columbia Scholastic Press Association. To accept the award, Mr. Fantaski/Fac. took five staff members to New York City. After three days of touring and learning new ideas, the crew began its trek back across the state of Pennsylvania to head home. After about three hours of theme deliberation in the van, all agreed upon Life Itself Is Not Enough for the 2011 book. Madison Rumon/12 said, "We knew that we wanted something completely different than the 2010 book. We tossed around so many ideas. The 2010 book had its own tone, sort of a mixture of grunge, industrialism, and whimsy all wrapped up in a black and fluorescent package. To mix it up, we decided that we really wanted a more philosophical book for 2011. When Livy Ciotoli/Grad. suggested Life Itself Is Not Enough, we all immediately fell in love with the concept. It was truly a magical moment, one we hadn't felt with all the other themes that we discussed."

Stemming directly from the cover design, the theme began to come to life. As a major graphical tie throughout the book, the staff widely implemented the slant found in the lower right corner of the front cover. Additionally, to add a bit of wonder, they eclipsed an "O" on the cover to give it a more astronomical feel. Finally, the staff hoped that the theme would encourage readers to analyze and find purpose in existence, simply because Life Itself Is Not Enough.

Be There or Be Square...
 In Time Square on St. Patrick's Day, Grace Gongaware/11 adjusts the exposure on her Canon XS camera to acquire optimum lighting. "It was an honor to travel to Columbia University in NYC to accept our Crown award. We learned a lot of new techniques and got to tour the city," said Gongaware. Of all parts of town, she enjoyed Time Square the most.

Busy Body...

In an attempt to meet the impending deadline, Jenny Harold/11 types the caption for her own picture on the yearbook spread. "Everyone on yearbook staff was always really busy right before a big deadline," said Harold. She, and three others, typed all captions for the book.

For the first time in a few years, my choice for Editor of the Year came quite easily. After speaking with Sarah, my chief editor, we both agreed that one senior on staff gave just a bit more effort than the rest. On behalf of Sarah and myself, we proudly and thankfully have chosen Madison Ruman/12 as the 2011 Campus Editor of the Year. While we sometimes struggled getting pictures, captions, and stories, we never once had to worry about any business aspects of this book. Thank you, Madison, for loving yearbook as much as we all do you. Congratulations from the bottom of our hearts!

MORE THAN A SPORT

Winterguard participants addicted to performance sport, art form

Story by
K. Painter/12

Winterguard members threw rifles and flags into the air, reaching perilous heights, and danced part of their show. The pain from various injuries could never show on their faces.

Taylor Kistler/12 said, “Winterguard is basically the sport of injuries. Yes, it is a sport, thank you very much. There are many girls who have suffered lasting injuries that were resulted from guard. I personally have severe knee problems and slight hip problems, but it’s all been worth it.”

Teamwork also served as a crucial aspect of a successful winterguard show. Rochelle Linsenberg/12 said, “Winterguard taught us how to work together as a team and overcome all of our struggles in life and on the floor. It is an activity that I have grown to love and enjoy. It tests the mind and the body, pushing you to your very limits. It’s an amazing feeling being one of the captains because of the dedication and all the great people you get to work with. I love being the face of Kiski, along with Taylor Kistler.” Winterguard brought out the strongest emotions in many of its members. Gina Erb/12 said, “Winterguard isn’t a just sport to me. It is my addiction. We play the only sport that requires its participants to show emotion the entire time and tell a story through our emotions and actions. It’s not just spinning around and dancing to music. It’s an art form, and I’m addicted to it, along with twenty-five other people.”

It was a nice break from going to class." In addition to dancing, he played baseball and wrestling for the varsity teams.

Our winterguard show this year is entitled The Colors of Light. It tries to elicit all the different emotions associated with different colors. We start with red tones and eventually progress though all hues of a rainbow. Orchestrated to Sol Fa, written by Karl Jenkins, the show demonstrates different, awkward meters throughout. I hate the 7-5-7-5-7-7 meter. I keep wanting to count in eights, which is so much easier. At the end of the show, we all gather into a triangular shape and toss our opalescent flags together. It literally looks like the triangle leaps off the tarp into the air. I like this show a lot better than last year's.

A TALENTED CROWD

Key Club talent show provides outlet for expression, performance

Story by
K. Painter/12

On a chilly evening in February, students of all ages showcased their various talents in the high school auditorium. Key Club orchestrated the show and donated the proceeds to charity.

Alison Misho/11 and Sarah Rozewicz/12, both Key Club officers, served as emcees for the evening. Misho said, "As emcees, it was our job to keep the show moving. It was fun because

Sarah and I got to tell lame jokes and make fools of ourselves. We also got to show some support for the Steelers by wearing jerseys as we announced the winners. It really got the crowd into the mood for the big game." Rozewicz and Misho announced Kate Iseman/12 as the second place winner. Iseman, who also organized the entire show said, "Just being involved and being able to do such a great thing for charity was really cool. It was a ton of work organizing everything, but it was worth it. Winning second place was the icing on top of the cake. I really couldn't have done it without all the Key Club members who helped, though." Many Key Club members helped backstage, as well. Students sold refreshments, opened and closed the curtain, sold tickets, and ushered the acts on and off the stage. Jocelyn Nelson/12 said, "Helping backstage at the talent show was really fun, even though it was kind of stressful since there were some last minute changes in the program. I was amazed at how talented everyone was, and the little kids were especially cute. I had no idea Kiski had so much talent. Helping out was a really rewarding experience."

Piano Man...
In the annual talent competition, Matt Watson/12 performs with his band, Alias Party of Four. Watson said, "We like performing beautiful music in front of live audiences and hope to become more well known." Music served as a large part of his life since age eight.

We put so much work into the talent show. I basically had to sign away my soul for a few weeks. We spent late nights watching audition videos. Basically, it was the biggest orchestration of organization that I have ever been involved in. It was especially hectic because there were a lot of last minute changes that I was not expecting. The dress rehearsal was especially stressful. I also had to run to Giant Eagle in the middle of the show for cookies. In the end, the show went smoothly, and we made $1000. I also became really close to the tech team, especially Mr. Jack.

Chelsea Stapchuck/11 hurriedly did her best to count bills every Friday morning. With a smile, she crunched the numbers and returned change, ready to move on to her next customer in the Student Store. "I have really enjoyed my time with everyone in the store this year," said Stapchuck. Hidden away in the back of the 400 building, the Student Store proved to become an essential source of supplies, and students took advantage of the convenience it provided. "I usually buy a pencil there at least once a week," said Danny Meighan/12. Carly Chruscik/12 said, "I love buying candy in the morning. Skittles and Twix are my favorites." Pencils, pens, notebooks and snacks never ran short, to the delight of consumers who flocked to the Student Store during activity periods. "It's definitely busier than usual when clubs are going on. Sometimes the line is out the door," said Hannah Guzolik/11, who also worked at the Student Store. When asked about her favorite aspect of the club, Guzolik said, "Seeing the regulars that come in everyday for food or just to say hi always makes me smile." "I'm always there for the Reese's Pieces," said Jason Nelson/11. Along with feeding the student body, the Student Store held gym uniforms and Kiski Area apparel available to students, which proved to become a crucial part of starting the year well for Katie Shick/9. "I bought a new uniform there in the beginning of the year, and everyone was really helpful," Shick said.

Frosty Festivities...
To get ready for the holiday season, Mrs. Manganello/Fac, arranges a snowman in the window of the Student Store. Manganello said, "We do our best to celebrate all holidays with decorations." From welcoming students back to school to saying goodbye with caps and gowns, the Student Store workers did their best to reflect each event with eye-catching displays.

Clean Sweep...

Before a performance of the fall drama, Rumors, Dominique Carino/12 sweeps the stage to keep the actors safe. "Working backstage was always hectic, although I do have to say that this year ran more smoothly than others," said Carino. She also served stage crew for the spring musical, Godspell.

The student store is a great way to start off the day. It is full of candy, T-shirts, and Grace's inability to use the cash register. Some kids come down so much that I know exactly what they are going to buy before they even come to the checkout. Additionally, Mrs. Manganello and Mr. Schaeffer brighten my day with their constant bubbiness. To celebrate each holiday, we decorate the store with more items than you can imagine. That festiveness enhances the atmosphere of the store, and makes it a lot more fun for us and the customers.

Black and Gold..

Ready to eat the Green Bay Packers, Mrs. Jacobs/Fac. shows her support for the Pittsburgh Steelers on Good Morning Kiski. "When Mr. Roland said that the faculty member with the most Steeler spirit would win chocolate, I knew I'd win because I love chocolate and I love the Steelers," said Jacobs. She recognized her black and gold grill as her favorite part of the outfit.

Twix Fix...

Before school starts, Katie Ballas/10 purchases Peanut Butter Twix from the Student Store. "I don't visit the Student Store that often, but when I need a quick pick-me-up, I'm glad they have a big selection of goodies," said Ballas. She spent her club time with SADD.

MORNING MEDIA

Good Morning Kiski starts the day with technology-driven broadcast

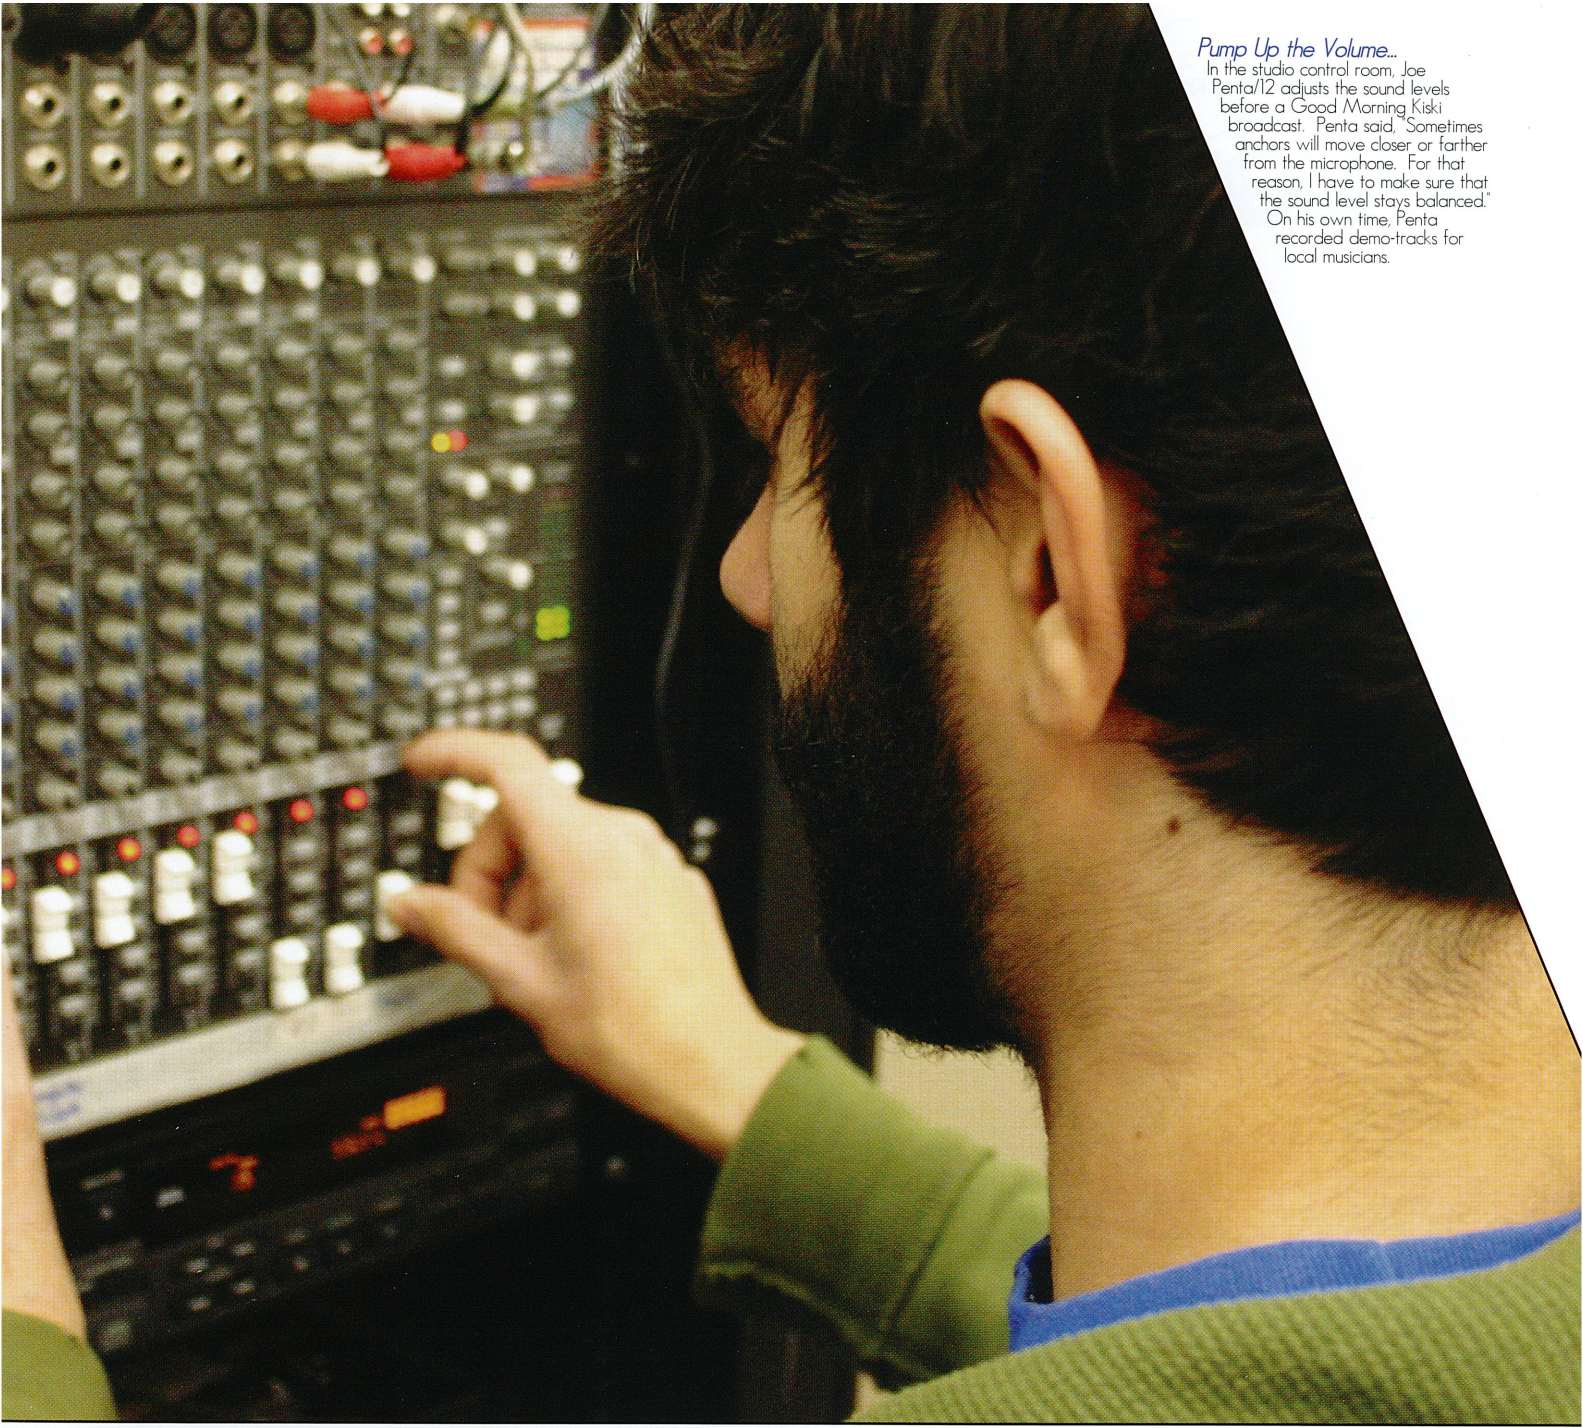

Story by
J. Penta/12

Every morning from 7:45 to 7:56, something special happened in a small, productive area of the school. Hidden between the attendance office and the yearbook room resided the Good Morning Kiski Studio. Seven full-time students and a plethora of rotating anchors assembled each morning, along with adviser Mrs. Jacobs/Fac., to broadcast a morning news program throughout the campus. Ryan Felt/12 said, "The best part of my morning was waking up knowing that I got to come to the studio to prepare the graphics for Good Morning Kiski. I loved the artistic freedom my job gave me. When else are you allowed to broadcast a picture of a small Asian child riding a rocket?" Concerning her duties, Tess Hempel/12 said, "I started out playing sound during my sophomore year. It was a lot of fun, but now I control the video switcher. Everything from the cameras to the graphics has to come through me before the students throughout the school can see it. It is all controlled by two big boards full of buttons, knobs, and sliders. Mine is the one that controls what students see, and the other controls what students hear." Dominique Carino/12 served as the set manager. On her responsibilities, she comically said, "I'm the boss around here, despite what Ryan and Mr. Jack may think." Carino's job entailed making emergency announcements, filling in for absent staff or anchors, and starting the broadcast by introducing the pledge of allegiance.

Pump Up the Volume...

In the studio control room, Joe Penta/12 adjusts the sound levels before a Good Morning Kiski broadcast. Penta said, "Sometimes anchors will move closer or farther from the microphone. For that reason, I have to make sure that the sound level stays balanced." On his own time, Penta recorded demo-tracks for local musicians.

Prayer Chain...

In the LGI, George Petree/12 relays prayer requests to Jason Temple/12 during a morning prayer meeting. Petree said, "Prayer provides an opportunity for students to give their worries to God." Each morning, a gathering of students met to give thanks to God before school started.

George Petree/12, Jason Temple/12, and I really enjoy starting each day in the LGI with prayers with any students who liked to come.

We were really worried at the beginning of the year when our previous adviser said that she couldn't sponsor us anymore. After asking many of the teachers throughout the school, Mrs. Gamble, a high school secretary, graciously agreed to lead our club. We had to gather in the atrium for the first half of the year, and then we got to move into the LGI, which was a bit more private, although we certainly weren't trying to hide. Morning prayer was a great way to start each day.

Branching Out...
Sprawled in a tree, Patrick Miller<sup>19</sup> enjoys the sights of cross country members below him at Northmoreland Park. Miller said, "I enjoyed the scenery because there's a huge lake, and it provides a great gathering place for people in the community." He resided in Washington Township, with a cat named Shadow and a rabbit named Max.

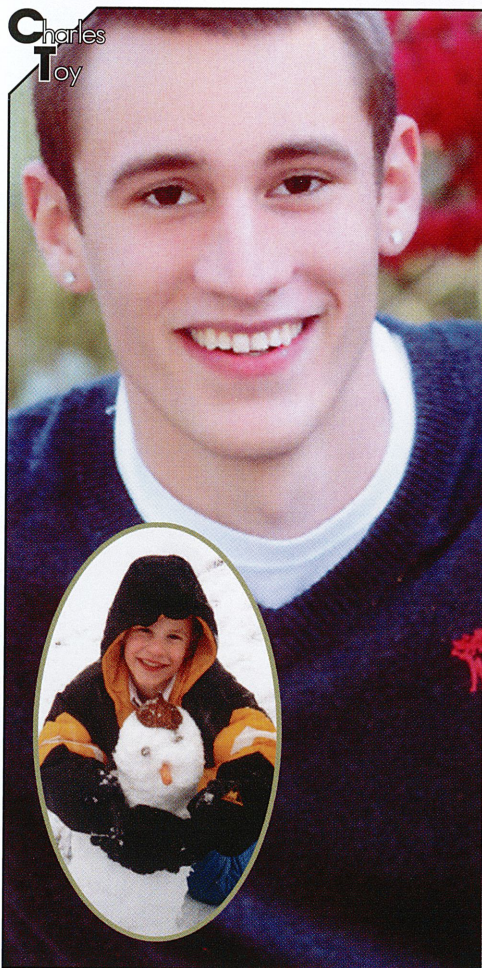

Reflecting back, what moments will you remember most? Is it that snow day that you prayed for because you just weren't ready for the test? Maybe the first time he held your hand. Or when you nervously approached the list for who made the cast for the musical. For so many reasons, life itself is not enough. It's not about just living and going through the motions... it's about friends, feelings, mistakes, triumphs, dreams, family, and so much more. Did you truly live this year?

Brandon...

I knew the day you were born that you and I were going to be close. I've watched you grow from building Legos to turning pens and bowls on the lathe. I've listened to you bang on pots and pans and playing a recorder to playing trumpet in the marching band. I've watched you overcome the disabilities with Crohns to doing whatever it takes to not let anything stop you from doing what you want. College then the States Police Academy...where has the time gone? I am and always will be here for you. I am so proud of you. Don't dream your life, live your dreams - they will come true.
I love you Bub,
Always, Mom

I've been looking down from heaven and I've watched you grow into a fine, young man. I've watched you march with the band and listened to the music that you play. I was with you on Senior Night, just like I promised. I was so proud of you then, just like I am now. Continue to do your best in whatever you do. Reach for the stars and take my hand. I'll follow you wherever your journey in life takes you. Remember, I'll always be

Courtney Woodhall

Dear Courtney,

"What lies behind us and what lies before us are tiny matters compared to what lies within us." - Walt Emerson

As we look back on your years at Kiski, we recognize both accomplishment and disappointment. Each disappointment only made you stronger and wiser. Accomplishments were celebrated with pride. The variety of activities you participated in molded you into a diverse individual with many qualities that will follow you throughout your lifetime.

CHEERLEADING was your passion. From the phone call that never came in 7th grade to making Varsity Captain, your school spirit and determination always shined through.

TRACK AND FIELD was our surprise. You constantly strived to improve your own personal records. We assumed you would be a runner, but your individuality led you in a different direction. Pole vaulting was something we never expected, yet you proved that you are capable of the impossible.

NATIONAL HONOR SOCIETY was respected. To participate in all your activities both in school and throughout the community and still maintain your grade point average was something we admired. School work always came first.

MUSICAL PRODUCTIONS, CENTERSTAGE, AND CHORUS was your natural talents shining through. Tapping your way through Modern Mille, flying off to Neverland, and taking it Day by Day in Goodspell. You were born to be in the spotlight. Follow your dreams - we believe dreams do come true.

We know what is behind you. We anticipate and look forward to what lies before you. But most of all, we love unconditionally what lies within you.

Love,
Mom and Dad

Eric Saul

Now is the time to look back with great pride and celebrate all of your accomplishments. It also marks a time to look forward to new challenges and anticipate all of your future successes.

It has been such a great joy to have shared your life. You have given us the privilege to love you and watch you grow into a caring young man.

Our wish for you is to achieve your dreams with confidence, live the life that you have imagined, and find happiness in all that you do.

Congratulations!

We Love You,
Dad, Mom and Blair

It's so hard to believe that our "baby Stephy" is graduating from high school! There are so many memories and the time has gone by so fast! It seems like just yesterday you were putting on your "itchy" tap costumes for your first dance class and heading off to preschool. You were our first born and changed our lives forever. When your brothers were born, things got interesting, but you were the best "big sis" to them! From all of our Disney trips that you loved so much, to our beach vacations, birthdays, and holidays, we truly have so much to remember and be thankful for. It has been our pleasure watching you grow into the beautiful, loving, caring and determined, young woman you have become. This fall, you are about to start a new chapter in your life when you go to college. We want you to know that no matter where your endeavors take you, you are always with us in our hearts.

We wish you all the love, joy and happiness in life because you definitely deserve it! Be strong, always believe in yourself, and never give up. You will go far.

Remember this famous quote from your favorite author...

Your school years started in art and gym class. You didn't want to move along to kindergarden, but when you did, you kept going and going. We have seen so much positive come out of your life. We are so proud of how you handle school, working, activities, friends, lessons, and band. It is a lot for a young lady, but you always come through with positive outcomes. Life is not always easy, but we have no doubts in our minds that you can again, accomplish anything you set yourself up to do. Don't ever forget, we are always here for you, whether you are near or far, need something big or small. Soon you will be off to college in your career choice. You set the bar high. I know you like the challenge. I don't see you stopping until you get what you want. Hard work will pay off again. We don't say it enough, but I sure think about it often. We are so happy the way you have grown up... respectful to others, independent thinker, an overall good kid. Keep it up. We love you very much.

P.S. Have fun skiing when you are in college.

Wow have the years flown by fast! We are proud of the remarkable young man you have become. Never forget all the terrific friends you have made along the way.

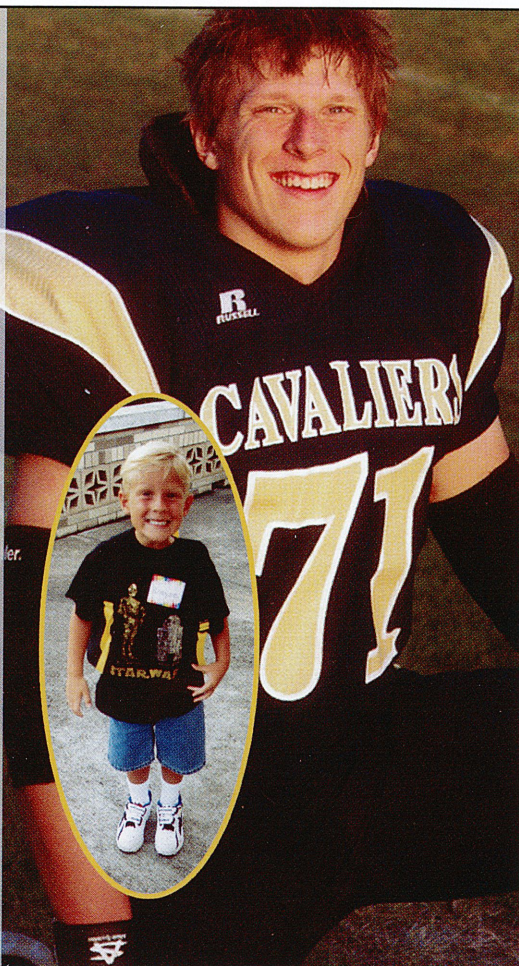

We have sung, danced, ran track, played basketball, and lettered in football. You were a captain, a leader! You hung tough and overcame so many adversities... adversities which only made you stronger.

And let's not forget all your academic and extra curricular achievements.

Thank you for all the exciting and fun memories, with many more memories yet to come. This is the beginning of a new chapter in the book of 'Blayze'. Don't be sad because the first chapter is over, smile because it happened.

I have watched you grow from a tiny baby to a beautiful young lady.

We have been through thick and thin together. I will always be by your side. I am your biggest fan and your personal cheerleader!

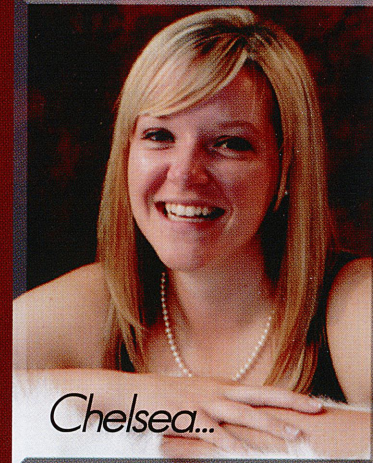

The spit baths at the bus stop, the spelling words we have studied, the papers we proofread, the late nights studying, the squeaks that came out of your saxophone, the band camps and all of the pictures, the competitions and the concerts I sat through with tears in my eyes... these are just a few of the memories I have loved and enjoyed.

You have so much drive and determination for life and that makes me proud. There is nothing stopping you from reaching your goals.

This next phase in your life will be one of the greatest experiences so far in your life! I know you will give it your all and come out on top, like you always do!

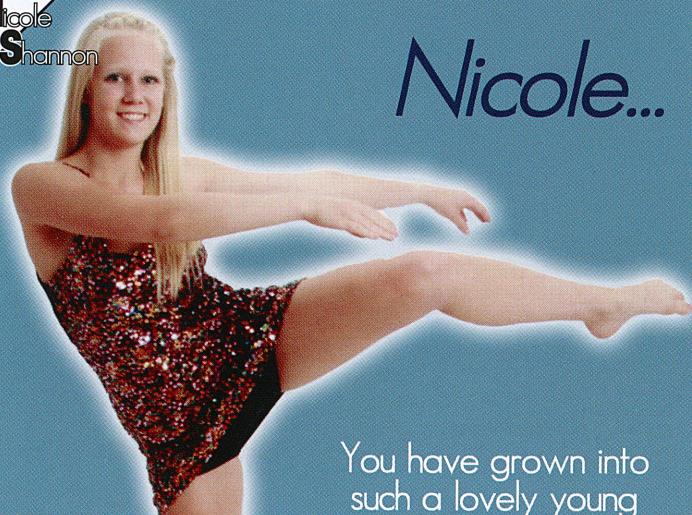

Congratulations! YOU DID IT!!! And you make me proud to be your MOM!!!! I love you.

From the moment you were born, I knew what a gift from God you were. It has been a joy and a blessing to watch you grow into such a kind and caring young lady. You are so loyal and always fighting for the underdog. You've always done things in your own way and in your own time. So, whatever path you take in the future, you can count on my support.

Stay true to yourself, look to God for direction, and you will continue to meet every challenge that comes your way. I am so proud of you. My "Baby Girl" is all grown up.

You always were such a precious and sweet little girl and now you've grown into such a beautiful young lady. We're so proud of you!

I remember so many special times through the years, especially our Slovak Christmas dinners, vacations (especially Nassau), and the many, many trips to Disney. Next big step - college!

Alexis, our beautiful daughter, we could fill 100 pages with all our loving thoughts of you. We've been through more difficulties together in 18 years than most people will ever see in a lifetime. Although life has not dealt you the best hand, you have remained the smartest, most resilient and compassionate person in the whole universe. You have a brilliant future ahead of you and we know success will follow you through all your endeavors. ## NOTE from the president

It has been said that your high school years are the best years of your life. For some, this may be true. For others, perhaps not. But, one thing is certain, our experiences over the past four years have definitely been memorable. If you played sports, belonged to clubs, were into art or music, or just spent time with friends, you have made memories that will last you a lifetime. What you do in the future is up to you. Take all the good aspects of your friendships, classes, and activities and allow them to shape the person you will become. Forget about all of the insignificant arguments, heartaches, and stressful times. What will be important is that you become an active, upstanding, and productive member of society. When deciding what to do with your life, think back to those good memories and do what makes you happy. Even though we may not always have appreciated it, our high school years have provided us with the tools needed to succeed. It is now up to us to move forward and build our lives using these memories and lessons. Be smart, remain flexible, and always keep in mind the words of Green Day... "It's something unpredictable but in the end is right, I hope you had the time of your life."

18 WORST Pix of the year 48

Reflecting a long Campus tradition, the yearbook staff now offers, once again, its worst pictures of the year. The student body looks forward to this part of the yearbook annually and has submitted all of the photographs that appear throughout the listing. The yearbook staff added quotes from the people in each picture to add even a bit more whimsy to the book.

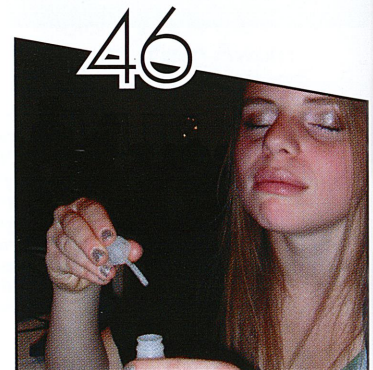

Realize that in judging, some adjudicators have advised the Campus staff to eliminate this portion of the book because they deem it inappropriate. However, based upon the students' requests and love of the tradition, we have included it again and will do so as long as the students demand it. Enjoy!

"Woodland Hills isn't the safest place for the marching band, so I acted like a mad-man." Victor Cardamone/12

"Nobody wants their kid to turn out like this." Blayze Stefaniak/12

"Joce, I know this was you. You better watch out; I will get even." Michele Milheim/12

from the EDITOR

Sarah Rozewicz/12

Imaginative. Innovative. Stylish. These three words simply cannot do this book the justice it deserves. No amount of certificates and awards can display the time and effort taken out of the lives of the staff and our adviser. Whether behind a keyboard, camera lens, or clipboard, you all worked tirelessly to create a truly inspirational book. Thanks to the help of each and every one of you, I am proud to present the 2010-2011 Campus yearbook. But more importantly, I am proud to call each of you my friend.

To my "girls" Kate, Michele, Maddie, Kellie, and Dominique: thank you for creating hilarity and entertainment during every stressful situation we've shared this year. Your continual cheerfulness, no matter the circumstances, will brighten the days of many others throughout your lives.

Claire and Jenny, it is only fitting that I group the two of you together. Your hardworking nature and ability to create fun from nothing will serve you well in life. Your wit can only be matched by that of Joe, Ryan, and Lance. The three of you have kept us "girls" on our toes, and for your excellent work (though slightly last-minute), I thank you.

Jocelin: would this book have been possible without you? The answer to that can be found in every caption, sidebar, and life lesson. Your attention to detail is going to help design two more excellent books, both of which I look forward to seeing. Alexis, as a sophomore, you have taken on so many different tasks, contributing to each aspect of the book when necessary. Your enthusiasm and readiness to tackle new challenges is exactly what the staff needed.

The original and captivating photography by Grace, Theresa, and Colin never ceases to amaze me. I admire your talent, and am eager to see the creativity you add to future Campus yearbooks. Morgan, Rosie, and Shelby: although up to your neck in extra-curriculars, you each were always willing to help the staff with anything we needed done. Your success in high school is demonstrated through many different clubs and activities, and I'm proud you added yearbook to that list.

Lastly, but most importantly, I find it difficult to express through words the thanks I owe to Mr. Fantaski. I have watched you be a mentor and friend to each member of the staff, and you have taught us all so much. You have poured endless hours into Kiski yearbooks, and your success is evident through the wonderful people who leave your staff each year (not to mention the countless awards under the Campus name). Because of you, I can at last use correct capitalization and grammar, as well as "bring back the Taylor Toolbar!" I can only hope to become half the person you are today; thank you for everything.

I am immensely proud and grateful for everything the 2010-2011 staff has accomplished this year. You have each contributed a special something to this year's book, and to my life. I rest assured leaving the fate of next year's book in your hands, and thank you all again for helping me appreciate that Life Itself Is Not Enough.

SENIOR portraits

The yearbook staff and the senior photographer conduct an assembly with all prospective seniors in the spring of their junior year to distribute all pertinent information concerning senior pictures. The senior photographer offers various times for individual appointments, as well as a wide variety of packages from which to choose. While we certainly encourage it, students do not have to purchase pictures or packages from the senior photographer. However, each student must pay a sitting fee for the processing and developing of the pictures. This year, Hourglass Photo charged $15. This price may increase from year to year due to rising costs involved.

The yearbook staff can guarantee that individual senior pictures will appear in the book only if each student schedules his/her appointment on time, arrives for the shoot on time, and chooses which proof to appear in the book on time. No profile shots will appear in the yearbook. Additionally, the yearbook staff and the senior photographer will define all due dates, and will include these in the information given out at the senior portrait assembly.

By having portraits taken by the same photographer under the same conditions, the yearbook staff can implement uniform quality for all photographs, thereby serving the best interest of all students.

For the 2011-2012 school year, the district will utilize the talents of Ms. Paige Duckworth for all senior portraits. Her establishment, Hourglass Photo, resides at 2 Labelle-Vue Road - Vandergrift, PA - 15690. Telephone: 724-568-3128.

SENIOR specials

While considered inappropriate in some yearbook judging forums, the Campus staff feels that the Senior Specials represent a Cavalier tradition worth keeping. Sometime after the winter holiday break, the yearbook staff designates one week for all seniors to vote on their favorites in a wide variety of categories. The staff collectively decides on which categories to include and which to eliminate. Still, the staff tries only to include categories that reflect positively on the students.

Only the yearbook adviser counts the ballots for each and every category; yearbook staff members play no role in the election.

To maximize the opportunity for each student to receive a limited amount of space for Parent Ads. Hence, to guarantee that individual ads will appear in the book, the staff suggests that parents submit them as soon as possible. The Campus staff reserves the right to deny Parent Ads once the designated amount of space has become depleted.

Senior Special, no senior may win two categories, with the exception of the "Best Friends" and "Class Couple" categories. Should one student win two or more categories, the yearbook adviser governs the final decision on how to award each category.

SENIOR directory & parent ads

Determined by deadlines, the yearbook staff designates a single week, usually in January or February, for seniors to complete a directory sheet that asks for all of the clubs, sports, music ensembles, academic curriculum, and future plans for each senior. The yearbook staff includes only directory information submitted by the designated deadline and reserves the right to expunge any entries that include falsified information.

On the first day of school, each senior receives a form that defines everything parents need to know about Parent Ads. The form defines pricing, requirements for the ad, and relative deadlines.

Later in the year, the yearbook staff will remind parents with another copy of the Parent Ad flyer.

The yearbook staff does its best to personalize each ad, and this takes a considerable amount of time. Furthermore, each year, the staff has only

CLIENT satisfaction & pricing

By virtue of the fact that the yearbook represents a student conceived, planned, and produced publication, the staff cannot guarantee complete satisfaction to the purchaser. Hence, the staff will refund no money for poor portrait quality, misspelled names, etc. Books returned for refunds must not have any writing in them, and cannot display any damage obviously done by the student. Once returned, the book becomes the property of the staff and may be resold at the current cost.

The yearbook staff will exchange books only for certain reasons. No exchanges will transpire unless the adviser determines that the book has a major flaw such as missing pages or pages printed upside-down. All refunds and exchanges happen only at the discretion of the adviser.

Should the yearbook staff have no record of a student ordering a book, the student must produce a receipt or a cancelled check to demonstrate proof of the purchase. No student may pick up a book for another student.

Students order books during Campus Week, the first full week after Labor Day. Each student must fill out a yearbook ordering form, place it in an envelope with the appropriate payment, and drop it in the wooden collection box outside room 106. The yearbook staff accepts 900-950 orders and then starts a waiting list. Students on the waiting list pay $10 more and do not pay for their books until distribution day. Additionally, any student who signs the waiting list or waiting list form must pay for his/her book at the end of the year or the staff reserves the right to hold report cards/diplomas; every unpaid book/balance represents a student debt.

Students may pay half during Campus Week and half after the December holiday break if they wish. Still, if the student misses the announced deadline for second payments, a late fee will occur.

PATRONS

The Campus staff would like to thank the following students, parents, and friends for their one-time generous donation to yearbook functions. The staff utilized this money to help defray the costs for general supplies in the yearbook room.

IS NOT

Can you believe that it's actually over? Or is it? As you reflect back upon the 2010-2011 school year, was this the year that you truly made your mark?

If not, there's always next year. Still, who knows what the future holds?

What surprises does the world have in store for the seniors? Will Micah and Elliott's friendship prevail throughout the rest of their lives? How many pairs of running shoes will Kylie and Ryan wear out together? And how many vehicles will Rome actually fix in his career? Whether arriving to class reunions with a PhD or a new last name, be sure to eagerly share your accomplishments with those who walked beside you during your high school years. Learn to appreciate differences and realize that every individual has something to offer.

Whatever each student may choose to become in life, our hope is that this yearbook has created the urge to step off of the sidelines and into the game: to be not a bystander, but an active participant in the endless canvas of life. In each angry, sweet, humorous, bitter, exciting time that will surely come, embrace each moment, and realize that Life Itself Is Not Enough.

Callin' All Moffitts...

Just after one of the first large snows of the season, Colin Moffitt/11 catches air over his driveway in Washington Township. "You can't always dwell upon your problems. It's always better to live in the moment. What's happening right now is always most important to me, and there's nothing quite like being in mid-air on a snowboard to free your soul. In those moments, I've learned that life itself is not enough."

As she watches her teammates race by on the Baldwin track, Falyn Ritter/12 cheers from the sidelines. Ritter said, "Running has helped me to realize what's important to me. When I run at home, it gives me the chance to work out problems without distractions." Ritter competed on both the cross country team and the track team.
